Story of Joe's life of 16 years filled with love, pain

Pat Gerlach

Phyllis Best knew she could no longer postpone the inevitable.

Taking a deep breath, she pulled open a drawer that had belonged to a red-headed freckle-faced 16-year-old named Joe.

Among the familiar sweatshirts, crew socks and Beatle-mania belongings, Phyllis found a sheaf of notebook paper that contained the carefully penciled "My Story — A Story to be Shared, by Joseph McGill."

JOE WROTE of an infant born with chronic kidney disease whose parents were told "I would die very soon" and were advised by doctors to "have me taken home and watch me die."

He wrote about a mother who refused to listen. "She took me home and fed me, took good care of me, and watched over me day and night."

And he wrote of a father "who worked long hours so he could keep up payments on doctors bills, hospital fees and support my three brothers and a sister" until he died of a heart attack in 1972.

Joe recalled spending a "good part of my life" in hospitals and "13 or 14 major operations . . . with dozens upon dozens of minor ones."

He remembered roommates who were fearful of surgery and telling them there was no cause for worry. "All you have to do is have a little faith and confidence in the guy who is doing the cutting," he'd tell them.

JOE WROTE OF beating his kidney ailment to lead an active life that included wrestling, soccer, rugby and tackle football. He confessed, though, to being a little sensitive about the "battlescars" that marked his sides "like a road map."

Throughout his story, Joe emphasized his thanks to "God for the excellent doctors . . . for caring parents and relatives" and the medical breakthroughs that helped "the very ill people — the kind of people like I was."

And he concluded by saying that the thanks "fall mainly on my mother. If she hadn't kept feeding me and watching over me in my time of need, I may not have been here to share my story with you."

But Joe did not have time to write the real ending to his story.

The end came one cold January evening when Joe and his 12-year-old brother Tommy were walking from their Roselle home to a neighborhood drugstore. They were going shopping for birthday gifts for their mother.

They were struck by a car just a few yards from their front door. Tommy died instantly. Joe suffered massive head and internal injuries.

Phyllis is a radio operator for the Schaumburg Police Department, but she was spared the agony of dispatching ambulances for her sons. Instead, a telephone call from the Roselle police brought the bad news.

Joseph McGill

JOE, WHO HAD written "I value life," clung to his for 10 days after the accident.

Phyllis says Joe's story helped a little.

"You always wonder whether your kids have any idea how much you love them," she says. "I guess Joe really knew."

JFK killing linked to dead witness

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new star witness told the House Assassinations Committee Friday that mystery figure George de Mohrenschildt, who died as an apparent suicide Tuesday, claimed he and Lee Harvey Oswald planned the murder of John Kennedy "from A to Z."

The witness, Dutch television newsman Willem Oltmans, also submitted hearsay evidence that there may have been $50,000 contract out on Kennedy's head in Texas. He said he met an oil worker who claimed to have been offered the hit contract.

The panel summoned Oltmans suddenly after he had stated, in various morning interviews, that an alleged conspiracy to kill Kennedy involved Oswald, de Mohrenschildt, the FBI, the CIA, the late Texas oil billionaire H.L. Hunt, anti-Castro Cubans and Oswald's assassin, Jack Ruby.

DENYING OLTMANS' accusations that Hunt was involved, a spokesman for the Hunt family said the late Texas oil billionaire never knew de Mohrenschildt.

"To claim that de Mohrenschildt was a friend of H.L. Hunt is totally false," said James C. Oberwetter, a spokesman for the estate of Hunt, who died in 1974.

"It is ludicrous to state that he (Hunt) had anything to do with the assassination of President Kennedy," said Oberwetter. "Any allegations by Willem Oltmans that H.L. Hunt was involved with De Mohrenschildt or Oswald in any way are figments of a strained and distorted imagination."

Oltmans' claim to startling knowledge of the Kennedy killing stems from his long friendship with de Mohrenschildt, the Russian-born language teacher and Oswald acquaintance who died of shotgun wounds in Florida Tuesday.

Police ascribe that death to suicide. Oltmans said Friday he agreed. He said his friend, who had a history of mental instability, was terrified of being called as a Kennedy assassination witness by the House panel.

The death left Oltmans as the only person known to have some knowledge of de Mohrenschildt's allegations on the Kennedy murder, and the panel, questioned him behind closed doors for more than three hours.

AFTERWARDS, HE told reporters he had testified about a talk he had with de Mohrenschildt in Dallas last February, in which de Mohrenschildt told him that Oswald "acted on his instructions" in killing Kennedy.

"They discussed the assassination from A to Z and they knew they were going to kill Kennedy," Oltmans quoted de Mohrenschildt as saying.

Oltmans also said he gave the committee pictures of an anti-Castro Cuban alleged to be part of the Kennedy murder conspiracy, and the name of a "very crucial" FBI official de Mohrenschildt identified as another conspirator.

He declined to name the official.

He also said he had interviewed a Texas geological engineer named "Logue," who "said he was offered $50,000 in the office of Loren Hall to assassinate Kennedy."

OLTMANS IDENTIFIED Hall as a Dallas attorney.

Rep. Richardson Preyer, D-N.C., a committee member, said later the panel had no other evidence to corroborate the murder-contract allegation.

In one of his Friday morning interviews with TV reporters, Oltmans was asked on ABC-TVs Good Morning America, "who killed President Kennedy?" He replied: "Oswald, No. 1. De Mohrenschildt, No. 2, according to his own words."

ASKED WHETHER the conspiracy also included Ruby, who later shot Oswald to death, Oltmans said, "Very much so. Because he knew Ruby intimately well and had been in Ruby's (Dallas) nightclub."

Truschke seeks probe of newsletter

The Democratic candidate for Elk Grove Township supervisor has asked the state's attorney's office to investigate whether incumbent Republicans have used taxpayers' money for political purposes.

James Truschke this week has charged the Republicans mailed out a township newsletter a week before the April 5 election, the first such letter mailed to "voters who have resided in Elk Grove Township for years and who have never received such reports before."

Supervisor Richard Hall denied the charges, saying the newsletter was one of the township's quarterly letters distributed regularly.

HALL SAID about 20,000 copies of the newsletter were mailed, adding the circulation was increased between 25 and 30 per cent over the last mailing in December.

The newsletter cost about $1,000 to print, Hall said. It was mailed at bulk rates at a cost of $1,500.

"Every quarter we've increased coverage," Hall said. "We've planned this from the beginning and have substantially increased coverage over the last four years."

He said one issue the Democrats have used in the campaign is the lack of communication between township officials and residents.

THE NEWSLETTER was scheduled to be mailed March 14, but a problem with the printer delayed it until March 21, Hall said.

It previously has been distributed door-to-door by volunteers, Township Clerk Sharon Sharp said. "But we thought if we had volunteers on the street, it would look political," she said.

Hall said the mailing was the first step in a new system in which a semi-annual newsletter will be mailed to all township residents.

The newsletter does not contain a plea for votes, but its front page story quotes Hall as saying, "We at Elk Grove Township, the elected officials and our staff, are proud of the township's achievements and believe we have met our obligations and fulfilled the trust of the people . . ."

EXCEPT FOR a list of the incumbents in the newsletter's masthead, the newsletter does not name the Republican candidates.

But Truschke called it unethical and "highly" improper and asked State's VICTORY CHEERS. Fremd High School fans show what team they think is No. 1 during tense 48-47 victory over Hinsdale South Friday afternoon in Normal in the first girls' state basketball tournament. Fremd will play unbeaten Sterling today at 12:15 p.m. in the semifinals.

Tension is Normal for fans of Fremd

Byline report

Jeff Nordlund

NORMAL, Ill. — The tension has been tremendous. It has been a season filled with drama

There may have been times they wished there never was a state basketball tournament, but the families of Fremd High School's girls wouldn't trade it for anything right now.

The Vikings are one of the final four in Illinois girls basketball, and it's a very special feeling for the fans who have supported this team all season.

The families of several Fremd players gathered in a cramped motel room Friday evening to savor the afternoon victory over Hinsdale South and to watch the evening session on television.

AS REPLAYS of Fremd's 48-47 victory flashed across the screen, they cheered as if it was happening for the first time.

The girls tournament, the first in state history, seems to be striking the same nerve so evident in the tradition-packed boys competition.

These Fremd fans were excited and optimistic about their team's chances today against unbeaten Sterling, and they were typical of the 880 Viking supporteers who assembled in Normal for this event.

There are many theories about why Fremd's girls basketball team is where it is today, but one that was obvious in the crowded room Friday was the size of the families.

There are 27 children in the families of the five Fremd starters, and the Moffetts top them all with 10. With that size, every family has its own built-in basketball team.

"THE GIRLS GO out together all the time," said Mrs. Lorna Bruns, mother of Fremd guard Connie, one of the key performers in the win over Hinsdale South. "They play three sports together at school and in the summer they stay together. They're just a sports-oriented group."

Kevin Cannon, brother of guard Colleen, agrees.

"Fremd's a winner because it's the closest-knit team around," he said. "It's like a big family. No one's a star on this team. They can take criticism, and they are knowledgeable enough to give it also."

Fremd is assured of playing two games today, but the Viking fans are talking victory. They know what victory is all about because Fremd girls have lost only once in 65 games over five years.

What happens if Fremd wins its last two games today?

"The whole town of Palatine is going to open up for us!" they shouted.

Delay to be sought in Columbo trial

In the wake of allegations in the news media and setbacks in the Illinois Supreme Court, defense attorneys for Patricia Columbo said they will request Monday that Miss Columbo's trial for the May 4, 1976 slayings of her family be delayed until June. Miss Columbo, 20, and Frank DeLuca, 39, are scheduled to be tried Monday for the murders of Frank, Mary and 13-year-old Michael Columbo, 55 E. Brantwood Dr., Elk Grove Village. Published reports this week have alleged that DeLuca, while awaiting trial in jail, solicited to have two prosecution witnesses murdered. In another development, the Illinois Supreme Court announced Friday that it will allow prosecutors to obtain hair, handwriting and fingerprint samples as evidence.

Smrekar gets 200-600 years

Russell Smrekar, 21, of Joliet convicted murderer of a man and his pregnant wife in Lincoln, Ill., and a suspect in the disappearance of a Rolling Meadows man, was sentenced Friday to from 200 to 600 years in prison. Smrekar was convicted Feb. 28 for the shotgun slayings of Jay Fry and his wife, Robin. Still missing is Michael Mansfield, 20, of 3915 Gull Ct., Rolling Meadows. Fry was to have testified against Smrekar at a shoplifting trial, and Mansfield was to have testified against Smrekar at a burglary trial. The Frys were killed Oct. 9, 1976. Mansfield disappeared Dec. 31, 1975.

Two men charged in auto thefts

Police Friday broke up what they called "an auto strip shop" operation when they charged two men with the thefts of vehicles from Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect and Palatine. Police from four agencies including Elk Grove Village, Arlington Heights, Naperville and DuPage county raided a garage owned by Billy Lawson, 30 at his home near Naperville, and recovered $45,000 in stolen autos and automotive parts. They also arrested Lawson's brother, Henry, 37, of Cicero. The raid followed the arrest Thursday in Arlington Heights of Charles E. Norris, 26, Chicago, also believed to be connected with the auto thefts. He was arrested following a chase in a stolen camper truck through Arlington Heights. Among the five stolen vehicles recovered were those belonging to Edward Iwanowski, 2315 Olive St., Arlington Heights; Ann Dickinson, 546 E. Northwest Hwy., Palatine; and Trygve Haegeland, 637 Pickwick, Mount Prospect. The Lawsons also were charged with unlawful use of weapons. They are scheduled to appear April 11 in DuPage County Circuit Court in Wheaton.

Benefits sought for woman in coma

HOLIDAY, Fla. (UPI) — Lucille Esposito doesn't think of her daughter as a 42-year-old woman who has spent most of her life in a coma, but as a 15-year-old girl who needs her mother to survive.

Elaine Esposito, comatose since an appendectomy operation in 1941, doesn't even recognize her mother, but Mrs. Esposito said Friday her daughter would probably die if sent to a nursing home.

The possibility of putting her in a nursing home was raised last month when Elaine's Medicaid benefits were canceled because she had received a $9 increase in Social Security benefits. However, the rules governing the Medicaid payments are such that Elaine could again receive payments if she were in a nursing home.

MRS. ESPOSITO, 64, said nursing home attendants are "too busy and they just wouldn't be able to hear Elaine's moans like I can."

Yet the 64-year-old mother said she doesn't know how she's going to afford the $40 monthly rent for the suction machine, which keeps her 75-pound daughter from strangling on her saliva, or the frequent $200 trips to the hospital to have Elaine's paralyzed throat dilated.

The Espositos live on $500 a month social security benefits. Lou Esposito, Elaine's father, has been unemployed since 1960 after suffering two disabling heart attacks.

Mrs. Esposito has been appealing to social service workers and Medicaid officials in Holiday, a small town north of Tarpon Springs, to make an exception for her daughter's case. The efforts failed and the Medicaid benefits were dropped last month.

MRS. ESPOSITO said she hopes a federal court judge, scheduled to hear her case next week, will reinstate Elaine's Medicaid benefits.

Mrs. Esposito has abandoned hope that her daughter will ever return to normal, but refuses to let her go.

"To everyone else she may be a 42-year-old woman, but to me she's just a 15-year-old girl. She still has perfect fingernails and she's never had a bedsore. . . Elaine may not know that I'm her mother, but she knows I'm the one caring for her. I can't let her leave," she said.

ELAINE ESPOSITO is comforted by her mother, Lucille. Elaine, 42, has been in a coma since 1941. Her parents fear she will die if put into a nursing home, which is a possibility since Medicaid benefits were canceled.

Nazi book store ordered to move by Jewish owner

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A Jewish survivor of Auschwitz has ordered his new tenants, the local Nazi party, to move out of a building being used as the Rudolph Hess Bookstore.

Others in the residential neighborhood near the Pacific Ocean want the Nazis out, too.

The store's plate glass window has been smashed, an attempt was made to set the building on fire, each day the wall is splattered with tomatoes and passing motorists shout obscenities.

The store opened in a middle class area Monday with a big, black swastika out front. There was a formal opening with Nazi flags and a handful of men in Nazi uniforms.

THAT WAS THE first time Nathan Green, the building owner, knew who his new tenants were.

"The neighborhood is in an uproar," says Paul Wong, a grocer across the way. Police cars park every evening, and now a detail of three uniformed Nazis stand guard in the store behind locked doors.

Just down the street is the Temple B'nai Emunah, a synagogue founded by German Jews after World War II.

"It's a terrible reminder for our people to have to walk by that place," said Ursula Landsberg, the temple secretary.

Green has given the Nazis a seven-day notice terminating their $225 month-to-month rental agreement. If the Nazis do not move out by Tuesday, Green's lawyer will sue on grounds "of unlawful detainer."

Alee Burco, a neighbor who is Jewish, feels intimidated by the store but says:

"I believe they have the right to open this store. And I have the right to walk in my neighborhood without seeing this living symbol of hate and desire to destroy my people.

"Those rights are absolutely contradictory and I don't know what to do about that."

KARL HERLER, a Nazi leader, said: "San Francisco is supposed to be tolerant, but it is not tolerant enough to allow us. We are going to be evicted, or bombed out, or burned ut."

That possibility kept a nearby plant store closed much of the week. Businesses on both sides worry about fire.

The National Socialist White Workers Party said the purpose of the store is to offer 500 titles not found in other bookstores and libraries "because they are controlled by Jews."

Soviets' talk of bases hinders detente: Vance

PARIS (UPI) — Sec. of State Cyrus Vance said Friday the Soviet Union had threatened to alter the foundations of detente by attempting to interject the question of U.S. bases in Europe into arms limitation talks.

"If they should pursue that idea, then it would change the whole basis of SALT" (Strategic Arms Limitatioin Talks), Vance told reporters traveing aboard his plane en route from London to Paris.

In a harsh rebuke of American arms proposals, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko Thursday accused the United States of trying to gian "one-sided" advantages in SALT talks and raised the question of "liquidating" American bases in Europe. "This is required by our security interests," Gromyko said.

VANCE SAID in response: "In the past, as you know, the question of forward-based systems and the Soviet equivalent — namely IRBM's (intermediate missiles) and MRBM's (medium range missiles) — have never been included, and, therefore, if this were to be interjected into the SALT talks, it would be a total change from the past."

The secretary was referring to the 1974 Vladivostok agreement signed by former President Gerald Ford and Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev which set a ceiling of 2,400 long-range missiles for each side and formed the basis of a new spirit of detente between the superpowers.

Vance said the Soviets at Vladivostok had agreed not to raise the question of American forward bases at future arms talks.

Vance flew to Paris from London where he gave the "fullest support" of the United States for Britain's efforts to bring about a peaceful change to black majority rule in Rhodesia.

Senate votes 86-9 to adopt code for official conduct

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate, after weeks of debate, voted overwhelmingly Friday to adopt an ethics code requiring members to disclose personal finances and limiting certain outside earnings to $8,625 yearly starting in 1979.

"A quiet revolution has taken place," said the bill's chief architect, Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis.

The standards for official conduct, much like those the House enacted a month ago, passed by an 86-9 margin.

All the no votes were cast by Republicans, including Arizona's Barry Goldwater, who branded the code "a complete sham" and "an unfortunate April Fool's joke on the American people."

THE ACTION, strongly backed by Democratic Leader Robert Byrd, came after two weeks of debate, compromise and a last test in which the Senate voted 63-31 to kill GOP leader Howard Baker's proposed "sunset" provision to limit the code's life to 1981.

The code will be enforced by a newly created Ethics Committee, and legislation now must be drafted to put the force of federal law behind major parts of both House and Senate codes, with specific penalties for violating them.

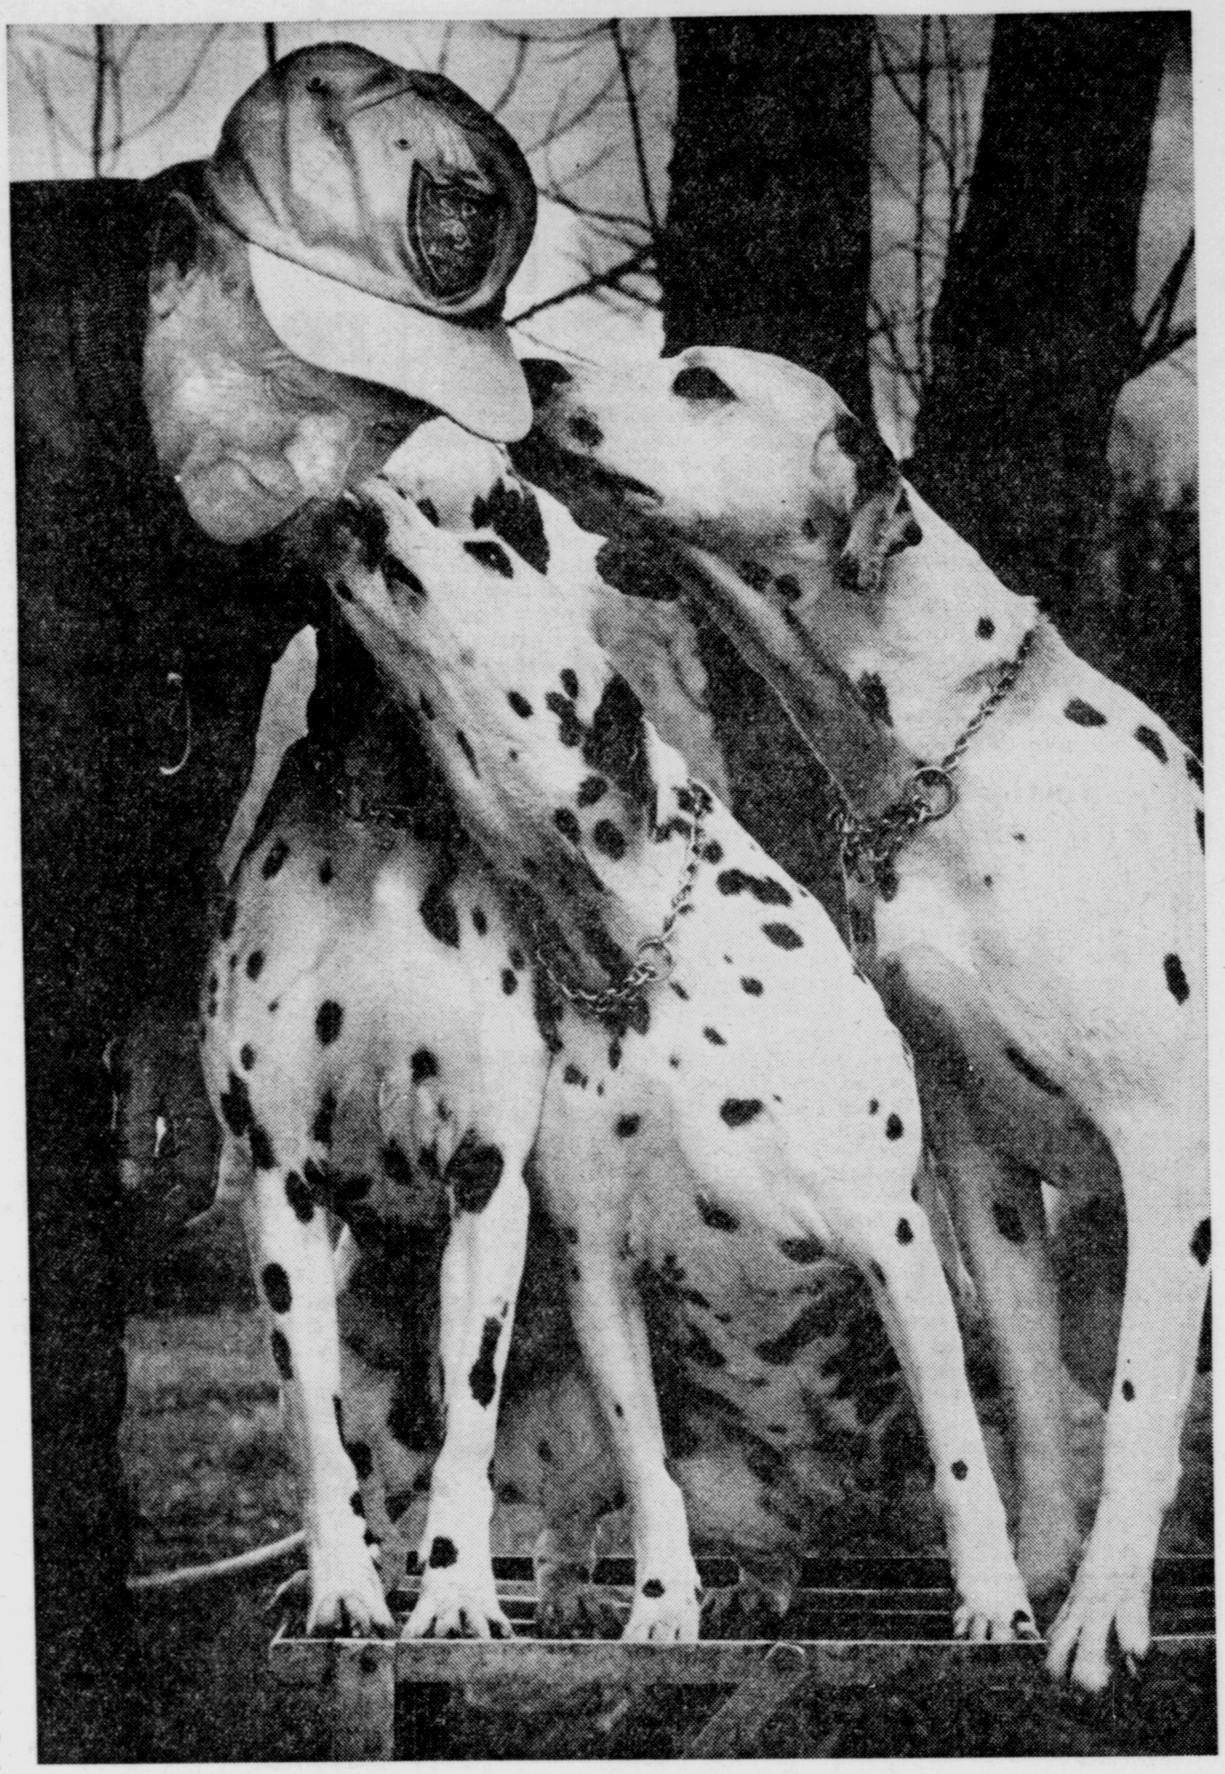
Designed largely to bolster public faith in the Senate, the code will force senators, top aides and many official employes to reveal annually the sources and amounts of their income, assets, investments and liabilities, but not tax returns.

A second provision, which drew major opposition, will require the same people to hold outside income from speeches and other "personal services" to $8,625 a year starting in 1979. That is a drop from the $25,000 maximum now allowed and equal to 15 per cent of the senator's new $57,500 salary.

SO-CALLED "unearned income" from family-owned businesses or farms and stocks, bonds or other investments was left unrestricted, but will have to be reported.

Other provisions forbid senators to: Accept gifts worth more than $100 a year from persons or groups with a "direct interest" in legislation; pay for official expenses with secret "slush funds," although they can use money in special, federally regulated "political funds;" practice law or other "professional" activities while the Senate is working and, if they do it on their own time, they may not affiliate with a firm.

"This code is a milestone," said Nelson, head of the special bipartisan panel that drafted a proposed code which essentially was adopted intact He conceded, however, that many members probably voted for it reluctantly, fearful of "the political hazard in voting against it."



WILLY NECKER's nationally traveled show dogs compete for his affection and for the spotlight. One of the oldest and most determined competitors is Chief, who howls when the Wheeling trainer leaves him behind on a tour. The canines skip rope, jump through hoops and climb walls for their master.

Woman, 82, evicted from house

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Police and health officials forcibly removed 82-year-old Anna Engle from her dilapidated frame house Friday night after an earlier eviction attempt got them a soaking.

The elderly woman was removed from her home, which was ruled a health hazard, by two police officers and two health department representatives and taken to a hospital.

Earlier in the day, Miss Engle dumped water from an upstairs window on the eviction detail, forcing a retreat.

"Get out! Leave me alone," she shouted. "This is my house. Get out!"

Health officials, acting under a court order, repeatedly had tried to persuade the woman to leave her ramshackle, 2½-story house in nearby North Fayette Township because it lacked plumbing, electricity, running water and heat.

During the past winter she had been removed by police and hospitalized for a short period after neighbors learned she nearly froze to death and slept with dogs to keep warm.

Dalmations' theatricality runs as deep as their spots

by DEBBE JONAK

Dogs were barking everywhere.

In the backyard, out in the kennels, even inside the house.

They were Willy Necker's dogs — mostly Dalmations. All were competing for the attention of the little, red-faced man.

They are accomplished competitors. Each knows a routine of tricks that they perform in shows across the continent.

NECKER WAS ONE of the first professional stunt dog trainers in the country. His kennels are located on Milwaukee Avenue north of Deerfield Road near Wheeling.

His spotted canines have appeared on the Ed Sullivan Show and Bozo, in sports shows and circuses for the past 30 years. This weekend he will take his show to the International Kennel Club Spring Dog Show at the Amphitheatre in Chicago.

"Most of the tricks they do I created," Necker, 68, said. Many of those stunts now are traditional — dogs jumping through hoops or over hurdles, climbing walls or standing on their hind legs.

His Dalmations are eager to perform. He has 14, but only six are in a show at a time. Those left behind often howl, he said — especially an 11-year-old trooper named Chief, who cannot quite make it through the tougher tricks any more.

But Chief was called to perform on this day. He and two others lavished their owner with affectionate licks when he stopped to talk with them on their outdoor training stage.

AT A WORD or gesture of a hand, they jumped, climbed, clowned around or stood still.

Chief skipped a few hurdles but held the rope steady as three of his colleagues jumped rope.

To learn the routines, the dog must be trained daily for five or six months, Necker said, but the time varies with each dog's intelligence.

His training method involves words of encouragement and praise when a dog does well, sharp words or a light slap when a dog disobeys.

Necker said he never uses the food reward system. "That's bribing and that's not successful training. I reward them with kindness and petting."

His interest in dog training began back in his native Germany when he was 14 years old.

"MY PEOPLE always had dogs and we had a particular shepherd dog named Annie," he said. His family encouraged him to take the dog to a police training school. He did, and dog training became a hobby.

"When I came to this country in 1929, during the Great Depression days, I could find no work for my carpentry trade," he said. "I told a few people I trained dogs."

Word traveled and by 1931 he was training dogs for shows. Soon he began teaching the canines stunts.

"Then I got the idea to start the dog training school. That idea was new at the time," he said. "When you talked about dog training, it meant mostly field work.

"I pioneered this work. I showed what you can accomplish with a dog, what you can do."

THE DOG TRAINING and obedience school, which still is operating, opened in 1936. Necker's first dog shows used Doberman Pinschers. He switched to Dalmations in 1946, after a friend lent him a dog of that breed named Rhumba.

"I just started to like those Dalmations," he said. The first Dalmation revue consisted entirely of Rhumba's offspring. All of the originals are gone now. Most of his current troupe were donated or bought.

When they reach retirement age, as Chief soon will, Nacker finds a home for them.

"I could never just give a dog a needle . . . I can't say 'He can't make that 11-or 12-foot jump anymore, so give him the needle,' " he said.

"They've been my companions, they help me make a living. I take the bows, but they do the work."

Necker has hesitated longer than usual to retire Chief because the dog seems to have show business in his veins. And Necker understands how he feels. Approaching 70, he knows he must retire soon. But he puts it off each year.

"It's not easy to quit," he said. "It gets in your blood."

Iran hit by second quake in 10 days

TEHERAN, Iran (UPI) — More than 100,000 frightened residents and vacationers camped in the streets of Bandar Abbas Saturday after the second major earthquake in 10 days struck the Persian Gulf port city and nearby mud-and-stone villages.

There were no immediate reports of casualties in the quake, which Tehran seismographs measured at seven on the Richter scale at 6 p.m. local time Friday (8:30 a.m. CDT).

The quake and a series of violent aftershocks appeared to be centered around the bustling port city and holiday resort town of Bandar Abbas, where 167 persons were killed and hundreds left homeless in a quake on the Iranian New Year's Day March 22.

(IN GOLDEN, COLO., a geophysicist with the National Earthquake center said the quake is considered an aftershock of the quake 10 days ago "because its epicenter was so close to that one.")

Officials in Bandar Abbas said Friday's quake hit as most of the town's 60,000 residents and 40,000 tourists were in the streets celebrating the 13th day of the New Year.

The officials said they expected casualties, if any, to the light because of a superstition that the day, known as Sizbeh Bedar (Unlucky 13th) would bring bad luck to anyone who remained indoors.

Officials said first reports said several towns and mud-and-stone villages along Iran's Persian Gulf coast had been battered severely.

BANDAR ABBAS police said they had reports of major damage in Minab, Khourgogo and on the island of Qeshm in the Straits of Hormuz where Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi has an estate.

April Fool's Day politicking hits city

Ed Hanrahan poked fun at Acting Mayor Michael Bilandic Friday. Roman Pucinski called Bilandic cynical and insensitive. All three seek the Democratic nomination for mayor in the April 19 primary. In an April Fool's Day spoof, Hanrahan issued copies of Bilandic's stationery on which the acting mayor "confessed" to accepting legal work from a controversial construction firm and to "stealing" the 6 p.m. meat sales issue from Hanrahan. Alderman Puncinski told newsmen Bilandic was "unfit to be mayor." He said Bilandic's response to a Justice Department investigation of alleged political harassment directed against Pucinski supporters was "cynical and shows his insensitivity." Another Democratic candidate Anthony Martin-Trigona filed an emergency appeal with the U.S. Court of Appeals seeking to set aside a gag order imposed on him in December. Martin-Trigona said the injunction, issued by U.S. District Court Judge Bernard Decker "was not only unconstitutional, it was also arbitrary and capricious." The suit, filed by Martin-Trigona, was against a real estate firm.

Justices propose candidates

Two revel Supreme Court Justices, James A. Dooley and William G. Clark, have proposed 10 candidates to fill Cook County Circuit Court vacancies, officials said Friday. The list is expected to draw the fire of some of the other Supreme Court justices who in the past have gone along with the nominations of the late Richard J. Daley's Democratic Central Committee. The Dooley-Clark list includes one woman and one black attorney. They said they believed their candidates represent a "cross-section of both the establishment and the anti-establishment.

Dooley and Clark were elected last year as independents running against Democratic party endorsed candidates. Chief Justice Daniel P. Ward, the third Cook County member of the court, was reported working on his own list.

Joliet firefighters strike

All but a handful of Joliet's firefighters went on strike Friday in a wage dispute with the City Council. Fire Chief Ed Peters said 123 men — "the whole fire department" — walked off the job or failed to report at 7:15 a.m. City Manager Lynn Neuhart said "all but two or three" were on strike. The union said 132 men stayed off the job. Neuhart said the city was trying to get the strikers back to the bargaining table. He said the health insurance [illegible] strikers was to be canceled at midnight. Neuhart told Joliet's 80,000 residents not to panic and to hook up garden hoses just in case there is trouble.

Illinois briefs

Public aid ordered to revamp office

U.S. District Court Judge Bernard Decker ordered the Illinois Dept. of Public Aid Friday to revamp the administration of its food stamp program to halt long delays in issuing benefits. Decker also ordered the department to process all food stamp applications within 30 days and provide back benefits to recipients whose applications have been delayed since January, 1976. The decision stemmed from a suit filed in Chicago in 1972 by the Legal Assistance Foundation on behalf of food stamp applicants. The suit charged that thousands of applicants have had to wait more than 30 days after applying for food stamps, and sometimes up to two years, to receive their initial benefits. Decker noted the department has "failed to adhere to the federally prescribed 30-day standards for processing food stamp applications."

Delanty named to law panel

Palatine attorney Steve Delanty has been appointed by Gov. James R. Thompson to the Illinois Law Enforcement Commission.

Delanty, 38, will serve on the 25-member commission which disburses to local law enforcement agencies federal funds from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

Delanty worked for eight years as a Federal Bureau of Investigation agent and later in the criminal divison of the Illinois attorney general's office.

His appointment will run from year to year at the discretion of the governor.

Man guilty in rock-throwing death

A McHenry County Circuit Court jury found Gary Lee Campbell, 20, Cary, guilty Friday of murder and involuntary manslaughter in a rock-throwing spree which left one man dead and another seriously injured. A nine-woman, three-man jury deliberated nine hours and also found Campbell guilty of three counts of criminal damage to property. He was found innocent of two counts of attempted murder. Campbell was one of five persons indicted by a McHenry County grand jury last November on charges they had thrown boulders from a moving van into the paths of oncoming vehicles and killed a man.

ICC urges safety for cargo trains

The Illinois Commerce Commission says the legislature and local governments should cooperate to reduce the risk of accidents involving trains carrying hazardous materials through the state. The ICC's report to the legislature, based on work done by a consultant, also recommended increased inspections, rail speed limits in densely populated areas and requirement that railroads prove they have sufficient liability insurance to cover claims resulting from an accident. The legislature asked for the study as a result of rail disasters involving hazardous cargo in Crescent City in 1970, East St. Louis in 1972 and Decatur in 1974.

Utilities target of legislative reform law

by STEVE BROWN

It might be a new push in consumerism or just the extra cold winter, but 1977 is becoming the year of the embattled public utilities in the Illinois General Assembly.

"There has to be a villain in every session and this looks like the utilities' year," one lobbyist said this week as he waited outside a committee hearing in Springfield listening to debate on one of the growing numbers of bills aimed at "reforming" the operation of public utilities in the state.

Preliminary committee action and even the introduction of some of the legislation has triggered an outpouring of lobbying action from the powerful utilities.

MUCH OF THE early rumblings have swirled around freshman State Rep. Ellis Levin, D-Chicago, who has served in the lower chamber only a few short weeks and has introduced a raft of legislation aimed at the utilities and the Illinoic Commerce Commission, which has the historical responsibility of watching out for the consumer.

This week, Levin introduced bills establishing a public counsel for the ICC and requiring several other changes in the operation of the agency.

One veteran legislative staffer cynically noted that the ICC is expected to automatically set up public counsel.

Levin said 42 other states have attorneys who represent the public in rate-making hearings and other commerce commission proceedings.

"Right now you have a situation with unequal resources," said Levin, who before being elected to the Illinois House spent part of his time in the Cook County State's Attorney's office fighting a proposed Illinois Bell rate increase.

"We worked nine months and spent $5,000 for witnesses, which is practically unprecedented for a consumer effort, but it was nothing compared to what the utilities do," Levin said.

IN ADDITION TO the commerce commission legislation, Levin also has introduced legislation to study the automatic fuel adjustment rate increases provision in the state law.

"A huge portion of the rate increases we have seen here is due to this," Levin said. Utility companies are allowed to pass along increases in fuel costs to customers without going through the lengthly rate increase process.

"Many gas bills have gone up over $50 per month recently and we have found that over 90 per cent of the increase has been due to the fuel adjustment provision," he said.

Levin is not alone, so far a subcommittee of the Illinois House Public Utilities Committee has held 10 hours of debate on the 'lifeline' legislation designed to reduce electric rates for smaller users.

"This is certainly the year of the utilities. I think public officials are more aware than ever of the problems with utilities," said State Rep. William Marovitz, D-Chicago, the principal sponsor of the bill.

"There is really a need for more utility reform," Marovitz added after a two-hour hearing which packed several dozen utility representatives into an unusually early 8:30 a.m. session.

WHILE LEGISLATORS have not finished introducing bills for this season, there are already several others that will get attention in the coming months.

Freshman State Rep. Terry Stezco, D-Tinley Park, has a bill to require utility companies to comply with federal and state air and water pollution standards.

State Rep. Roger Stanley, R-Streamwood, has turned his attention to the telephone company with a bill to prohibit prebilling customers for service.

Utility representatives are expected to oppose most of the legislation. They have already contended they will lose $165 million if the line legislation is approved. Utility company witnesses also objected to a bill to require a notice five days before the termination of service during the winter months.

LEVIN SEES the house utilities committee as more aggressive, harder working and more liberal than in past sessions. But he is quick to admit that passage of some of the session's more controversial legislation will take time. He also hinted that the effort might be tougher in the more conservative Illinois Senate.

Utilities lobbyists are expected to fight some of the legislation at every turn.

"I offered a simple bill to prohibit the utilities from using charitable contributions and advertising costs when figuring their operating expenses and I had 15 and ½ opponents to the bill," said State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights.

Schlickman split the representatives from the Illinois Commerce Commission to a witness for both sides of the bill.

200 tons of dirt fill hole, family doesn't need a pool

DUQUOIN, Ill. (UPI) — The curious came up to the rope barricade around the big hole in the Adolph Tecklenburgs' back yard, shook their heads and walked away.

"They were probably thinking to themselves 'Poor Tecklenbugs,' " Phyllis Tecklenburg said.

Truck after truck backed up to the hole and dumped loads or dirt into it.

Some 200 tons of firt, in fact.

The Tecklenburgs first noticed the hole about 100 feet from their home last Tuesday evening. It was only about 36 inches wide, but it was growing.

"IT LOOKED AS if it would get bigger so we decided to move the car," Mrs. Tecklenburg said.

When they awakened Wednesday morning, the little hole had grown to a big hole — one that measured 23 feet deep and 15 feet in diameter. It had spread to within about six feet of where the car had been parked.

The hole was believed to have been formed by the collapse of old coal mine workings that were abandoned around the turn of the century.

TECKLENBURG CALLED in the trucks. People flocked to the Tecklenburg home to see the hole. "They told us DuQuoin is undermined," Mrs. Tcklenburg said.

"We are lucky. We didn't lost a single tree or shrub. But we did lose a ladder and timber we had put over the little hole the first night," she said.

"It's filled now and we hope it stays filled," said Mrs. Tecklenburg. "We want to forget it.

"We don't need a swimming pool."

Adults-only policies are 'privileges' to some renters

by BILL HILL

Bill and Artamae Fraber are looking for a new apartment. They can't afford the extra $15 a month charged at Twelve Oaks Apartments, 1130 Wilke Rd., because they have a 2-year-old daughter.

But Mabel Searchy isn't looking. She's happy with her "adults only" living at Stonebridge Apartments and is willing to pay a similar surcharge to live without the youngsters.

Tenants at Stonebridge and Windsor Woods apartments already are paying $10 to $15 extra a month to live in buildings that forbid children but offer other conveniences.

"WE THINK IT'S very unfair and unjust," Mrs. Fraber said of the $15 surcharge Michael Sparks, the new owner of Twelve Oaks, is assessing when more than two persons live in an apartment.

Ms. Searchy, who has no children, sees the surcharge differently.

"It's a wonderful privilege to have them (children) separated from us," she says. "I love children, but I don't appreciate a crowd ot them running around."

While the surcharges are unique to Twelve Oaks, Windsor Woods and Stonebridge, other large apartment complexes in Arlington Heights — including Gatehouse, Prince Charles Garden and Brandenberry Park East — have adopted special policies to control where children live.

The philosophy behind the policies is that "people without children have just as many rights as those with children," Sparks said.

"Anybody who doesn't have children, doesn't want children around," Herb Hoffman, manager of Stonebridge Apartments, said. "They want peace and quiet. They don't want the vandalism children bring. They don't want the bicycles that are left around. They don't want the screaming and hollering."

Twelve Oaks' new rental policy has come to the attention of the village officials, who consider it outright discimination.

A new ordinance prohibiting apartment owners from basing rents on the number of persons living in an apartment has been proposed by the village board's legal committee.

RENTAL POLICIES AT other apartment complexes have gone unnoticed by the village because there has not been the furor to match that raised by the tenants at Twelve Oaks.

At Gatehouse Apartments, 2134 S. Goebbert Rd., there are no families with children among the 1,200 tenants. But there are no restrictions in the Gatehouse leases prohibiting children.

"We attempt to offer an adult community to people without children or pets," Steve Werkmeister, manager of Gatehouse, said. "That's not to say we deny apartments to people with children, but we point out to them that they probably wouldn't want to live here with all the party noises at night and other loud, crazy stuff going on," he said.

A couple families with children visit the Gatehouse rental office each week, Werkmeister said.

'We tell them that the backbone of Gatehouse Apartments is a social activities program geared toward people 26 or 27, single or newlymarried. We just tell them we don't have any children on the premises and that it's not geared towards that. If they still want to see an apartment, we'll show them one," he said.

AT PRINCE CHARLES Garden Apartments, 2407 S. Goebbert Rd., the management tries to keep families with children on the ground-level floors of their 11 buildings.

"We've gotten a very positive response to it," Joan Vanek, manager of Prince Charles, said. "It's basically a noise thing. Children running up and down the stairs is really an annoyance to other residents. You can't keep children quiet so we've found it's better to have them on the ground floor," she said.

Windsor Woods Apartments, 2626 N. Windsor Dr., has two buildings that are for adults only. Rents for those buildings are $10 higher because of the extra conveniences of such things as garbage chutes and elevators, Cheryl Smith said.

Windsor Woods also has two other sets of apartments with eight buildings each. One set is limited to families with children older than 13 and the other is for famiiles with children of any age.

"It seems to work out real well. Younger kids are together that way and they don't have to run from one end of the complex to the other to visit friends," Ms. Smith said.

At Brandenberry Park East Apartments, 2424 E. Oakton Ave., the management attempts to separate older residents from families with children. "The older folks just aren't going to put up with the kids running up and down the stairs," Joe Iocobo said.

"We don't have any hard, firm policy, though. If we have a vacancy and someone willing to pay the rent, you can't turn them away," he said.

McGuire license suspended over Marines incident

Butch McGuire's tavern in Mount Prospect will have its liquor license suspended April 11 and 12 for violating the civil rights of eight Marines who were refused entry to the bar on St. Patrick's Day.

The Illinois Liquor Control Commission handed down the ruling earlier this week. The Village of Mount Prospect, however, is dissatisfied with the decision, and Mayor Robert D. Teichert will conduct a local hearing at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the village hall, 100 S. Emerson St.

Teichert, as liquor commissioner of Mount Prospect, is responsible for issuing licenses to businesses wanting to sell and serve alcohol in the village. McGuire's is located at 300 E. Rand Rd.

The contorversy stemmed from a St. Patrick's Day incident in which the Marines — three colonels, three captains and two lieutenants from Glenview Naval Air Station — were denied admission to the tavern by doorman Joe Duffy who reportedly has had previous run-ins with uniformed service men at the tavern.

"THERE'S NO QUESTION that there was discrimination," Thomas Murphy, director of the liquor commission, said Friday. "It may have been an unfortunate, isolated incident (as stated by tavern owner Robert "Butch" McGuire), but it's one that shouldn't be allowed under any circumstnces."

David Mann, McGuire's attorney, testified at the commission hearing and admitted there were violations of state laws that prohibit discrimination against servicemen, Murphy said. Mann and McGuire, however, were unavailable for comment Friday.

"We have a public responsibility to educate other liquor licensees," Murphy said. "This is not a severe penalty. We've imposed two-day suspensions in a number of discrimination cases involving women, blind, handicapped and blacks."

Under the commission's ruling, McGuire will not be permitted to serve alcoholic beverages April 11 and 12 at his Mount Prospect tavern. Another tavern owned by McGuire at 20 W. Division St., Chicago, will not be affected. If McGuire requests a rehearing before the suspension date, the penalty will be stayed, Murphy said.

THE SUSPENSION was announced despite McGuire's apology for the inconvenience to Marine Col. Frank G. McLenon and his statement that his business "absolutely has no policy against servicemen." As a result of a letter of understanding signed by McGuire and U.S. Attorney Samuel K. Skinner's office, a federal investigation into the incident has been terminated.

Meanwhile, Mount Prospect police Friday served subpoenas on Duffy, McLenon and tavern manager Jim Miller to appear at Wednesday's hearing.

"I want to know more about it," Teichert said. "Our local interest should be paramount to the state interest. If not, it certainly should be equal," he said.

Teichert contended the commission's hearing on Mnday was conducted improperly. "It is my understanding it was an off-the-record thing," he said. "As I understand it, they didn't have the full (three-member) commission."

Murphy said transcripts of the proceedings were taken with one other commissioner, Sam Gutilla, present.

Village Atty. John J. Zimmermann said Mount Prospect is required to conduct a hearing "if there is any reason to believe there was an infraction of the law" and if the village was notified of the incident "by way of a third party"

If the village finds McGuire's in violation of the law, it can suspend the tavern's liquor serving privileges for up to 30 days or revoke the license, Zimmerman said.

12 candidates refused to answer

Survey on honesty law ignored

All nine Elk Grove Township Democratic candidate and three Republicans have ignored a survey asking them if they support a political honesty ordinance for the township.

Questionnaires were mailed to all township candidates the week of March 7, said Michael Smith, Northwest suburban coordinator of the Coalition for Political Honesty.

He has received answers from six Republican candidates, including Supervisor Richard Hall, Trustee Bernard Lee and newcomer Robert Jacobsen.

BUT MEMBERS of the Democratic slate have chosen to ignore the questionnaire, which asked candidates if they would support ordinances prohibiting officials from holding two governmental jobs or voting on issues in which they have private interests.

Supervisor candidate James Truschke said the Democratic slate did not make a blanket decision to ignore the survey.

He refused to comment on why he did not answer himself.

But Helen McMahon, a trustee candidate, said she "was told not to bother with it."

"I was told that I should throw it away in the garbage pail," she said.

She would not say who told her to do so, but she insisted it was not Truschke. She did say that two persons, one on the slate and another not on the slate, told her to ignore the survey.

"When Smith changed parties, it didn't go over well," Mrs. McMahon said. "The two people I talked to were very disenchanted."

IN NOVEMBER, Smith ran unsuccessfully as a Democrat for the Illinois Senate, but he recently switched to the Republican Party because he said the Democrats did not help him in his campaign.

However, Smith said the political honesty effort is nonpartisan.

The coalition was formed in late 1975. It works towards getting government officials on all levels to pass laws, including one that would end double-dipping or holding two government jobs and another calling for conflict-of-interest legislation.

Township Clerk Sharon Sharp, Assessor Charles Hodlmair and Highway Comr. Alfred Steil also said they support the efforts.

Hall wrote a letter to Smith, saying he supported the general concept.

"As township supervisor, I would not allow business to be done with any company in which I have any financial interest — period," Hall's letter said.

Hall said that although he opposes double-dipping, he does not think the law should apply to committee members who are not paid for their work.

Trustee William Schneck, who did not respond to the questionnaire, said he did not receive one. He said he would support the ordinance if he is elected.

Truschke asks newsletter probe

Atty. Bernard Carey to consider criminal charges.

Truschke cited a federal statute stating a congressman cannot use his free mailing privileges within 28 days of an election. A House resolution passed last week states franking privileges cannot be used within 60 days of an election.

"While these only apply at the federal level, I think they set the tone," he said, adding that depending upon the state's attorney's actions, he will "go to each legislator adking for legislation" for a state law identical to the federal law.

HALL CALLED the charges "a political move."

"They (the Democrats) have no issues and no knowledge of township government, so they make slanderous remarks," he said.

"I've received 10 to 15 newsletters in the last two weeks, so the idea of a governmental body's newsletter being sent out now is anything but unusual," he said.

Hall said the most recent newsletter differed from past ones in that he did not write a half-page column, which he said, exposed his name more.

"I regret I didn't get it out a week sooner," Hall said. "It would have given him (Truschke) a week longer to yell."

Dems warned about leaflet policy

The Democratic slate for Elk Grove Township has been warned by the Cook County State's Attorney's office that campaign literature must bear the name of the persons who publish it.

Supervisor Richard Hall this week said the Republican slate has known of the warnings for some time, but did not want to make them a campaign issue.

At least one piece of Democratic literature does not state who published it.

State law requires that the names and addresses of persons or officers of the organization "causing such matter to be published and distributed" must be printed.

James Truschke, Democratic supervisor candidate, said he received a letter from the state's attorney's office, which quoted the statute and said prosecution is not warranted.

"IT DOES NOT say my literature is improper and indeed it is not improper," Truschke said. "The statute, in effect, I feel is unconstitutional."

Truschke said the slate's literature is not anonymous.

"Who's anonymous? I list my name and where each candidate lives. All of my literature says 'a copy of our report filed with the county clerk is available for purchase from the county clerk,' " he said.

Truschke said the "majority of my literature" is rubber stamped with the names of the Democratic committeeman and committeewoman.

He said he assumes Hall took the matter to the state's attorney

Hall, however, said he did not. "I don't know who did and I don't really care," he said.

Twenty color guard units from throughout the Midwest will participate in the 1977 parade of champions today sponsored by Sheriff Richard J. Elrod's Law Enforcement Explorer Post 9714, the Northwest Patrol.

The day-long program at St. Peter Lutheran School, 111 W. Olive, Arlington Heights, will open with a pancake breakfast sponsored by the Northwest Patrol from 7:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

The Midwest Color Guard Circuit competition will start with individual events from 9 a.m. to noon, followed by the preliminary color guard contest at 1 p.m. for the 20 participating units.

The final contest for 10 units will start at 7:30 p.m., preceded by exhibitions at 7 p.m. by the "Spirit of 76" Senior Drum and Bugle Corpos of Racine, Wis., and the Hornets Drum and Bugle Corps, Chicago.

Area groups participating include the Colleens and Corsairs from Des Plaines and the Guardsmen and Guardsmen Cadets from Schaumburg.

2 women hurt in two-car crash

Two women were injured late Friday in a two-car crash on Dundee Road in Buffalo Grove.

Firefighters said the women were trapped in cars they were riding in following the collision at 10:43 p.m. in front of 100 W. Dundee Rd.

Arlington Heights and Buffalo Grove firefighters worked a half hour to free Charlene Rebulocle, 21 of Wheeling, firefighters said. Ms. Rebulocle was taken to Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, where she was treated early Saturday for a possible sprained ankle, cuts and bruises, firefighters said.

Firefighters worked an hour to free an unidentified 60-year old woman and then took her to the hospital. The nature of her injuries, and details of the accident, were unavailable early Saturday.

Elementary school picks

Next Saturday, voters will go to the polls to elect members of local boards of education.

Today, we are running our endorsements for local elementary district boards with contested races except for Elk Grove Township Dist. 59. Dist. 59 endorsements will run next week along with our comments on the unit district referendum in that district.

Schaumburg Twp. Dist. 54

There are two races in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54, with five candidates competing for two 3-year terms and two candidates seeking a 1-year post.

We endorse incumbent MARGARET PAGELER and newcomer PEGGIE ELGIN for the 3-year seats and make no endorsement in the 1-year race.

Mrs. Pageler has proved to be one of the area's outstanding board members. She has been fair and reasonable in the face of major and minor crises that have wracked the district, and showed common sense during the teachers strike in October 1975.

Mrs. Elgin is one of this year's strongest newcomers. Her experience as chairman of the Hoffman Estates housing commission and president of the League of Women Voters enables her to bring knowledge of the workings of other governmental units to the board that is now seriously lacking.

We do not endorse incumbent Esther Karras for reelection. Even though she has been a hard-working board member, we believe the other candidates will be more independent in searching for solutions to the district's problems.

We make no endorsement for the one-year term because of reservations about both Richard Sack and Donnie Rudd, a former board member.

Although Sack is well-intentioned, he knows little about the district or the workings of the board. The board of such a large, complex district needs members with a strong background in the district.

Rudd's service on the board from 1970 to 1974 benefitted the district by making other governmental units aware of the district's needs and by giving the district a voice in Springfield. But his many threatened and two actual resignations made him an uncertain factor on the board.

Wheeling Twp. Dist 21

We endorse XENOPHON DANIEL KAFCAS and HERBERT STEIN for two 3-year seats on the Wheeling Township Dist. 21 Board of Education.

Kafcas is one of the strongest newcomers in any district this year. A communications training specialist for United Airlines, he will be a sensitive and level-headed addition to the board.

Stein, an associate dean at the University of Illinois Circle Campus, has the background to provide a deep understanding and concern for education.

Newcomers Stuart Weinstein and Linda Kurtzman are also well qualified but do not have the background in the district that Kafcas and Stein do.

Prospect Hts. Dist. 23

Residents of Prospect Heights Dist. 23 will elect two persons to fill 3-year terms on the board of education and one to fill a 1-year term.

For the 3-year terms we endorse incumbents MEL LACE and MARIANNE STITAK. Lace, who is seeking his third term on the board, has been serving as board president. He has provided leadership and has been responsive to community needs.

Mrs. Stitak was appointed to the board last May. During this past year she has demonstrated her willingness to learn about the issues facing the district and the ability to function as a good board member.

For the 1-year term we endorse JANE ADELMAN. For more than a year, she has attended board meetings and has a good background in the district and its problems.

Arlington Hts. Dist. 25

Five candidates are running for two 3-year terms on the Arlington Heights Dist. 25 Board of Education.

For these posts, we endorse RUTH GRUNDBERG, one of the two candidates endorsed by the Dist. 25 Caucus, and MARTY KRAYBILL, who is running as an independent.

Mrs. Grundberg, a part-time tax consultant and volunteer in Dist. 25, has a good understanding of the problems of the district and a willingness to act responsibly in the face of declining enrollment.

Mrs. Kraybill, an active member of PTA, also has a great knowledge of the district and the ability to keep in touch with the community on many difficult issues.

River Trails Dist. 26

Three candidates are running for two 3-year terms on the River Trails Dist. 26 board.

We endorse incumbent RICHARD FOSTER and newcomer MICHAEL FREEMAN.

Foster has spent the nine months since he was appointed to the board diligently learning the ropes. He can add a measure of leadership and common sense to a board facing difficult decisions in trying to avoid projected deficits while maintaining educational quality residents expect.

Freeman is realistic about the financial condition of Dist. 26 and the choices that face the board. We believe he will be an open and honest board member.

Des Plaines Dist. 62

Four candidates are running for three 3-year terms on the Des Plaines Dist. 62 Board of Education.

For these posts, we endorse incumbent WALLACE MEYER and newcomers MARK GOLDMAN and RICHARD JOHNSTON.

Meyer has served four years on the board. Although he was part of the board which a year ago angered the public at a meeting on budget cuts by refusing to let irate citizens speak, he seems to have gained greater appreciation of the need to be responsive to the community. He has a good understanding of the district's problems and will be able to provide leadership as the district copes with declining enrollment.

Goldman, a certified public accountant, has both financial expertise and a genuine interest in education. Johnston, a teacher, also has good ideas for the district and has the potential for developing into a good board member.

We strongly encourage these candidates as well as the rest of the board to strive for honesty and openness with the community, particularly in the area of the district's finances.

East Maine Dist. 63

Three candidates are running for two 3-year terms on the East Maine Dist. 63 Board of Education.

We endorse incumbent PENNY LARSON and newcomer LARRY SOLOMON.

Mrs. Larson is completing one term on the Dist. 63 board. She has proved to be a strong board member capable of providing leadership.

Solomon, the assistant treasurer of a large corporation, has been following the board's activities for about two years and is knowledgeable about the district. He should be able to provide financial expertise to the board.

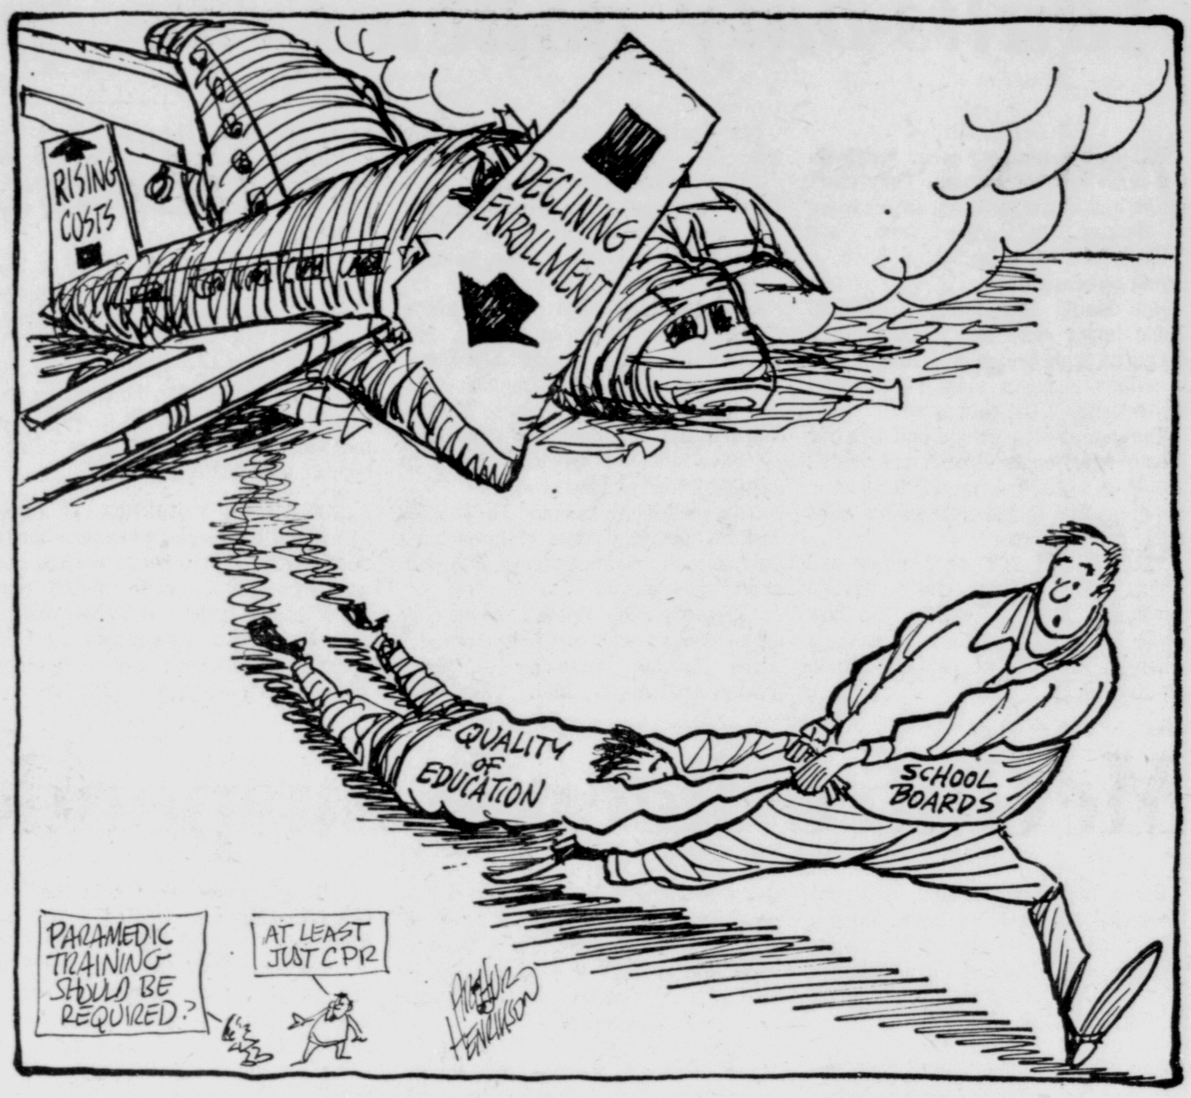
Berry's world

"There is a beautiful old saying of the white man that I love — 'As Maine goes, so goes the nation.'"



Keeping you healthy is my business!

Freedom — it's one word all tyrannies must fear

Paul Greenberg

I should have suspected that Indira Gandhi was in trouble when my copies of India News began arriving in sextuplicate. The more talk of efficiency, the more duplication. The worse the rot, the greater the need for propaganda and the less convincing it is.

India News had long since become Mrs. Gandhi's News — a microcosm of all that would bring her down. There was a complete absence of self-criticism ("Tribute to Mrs. Gandhi's Leadership" is a typical, hard-hitting headline). There were the blind lies that convince only the liar ("No Coercion, Says Mrs. Gandhi"), the Nixonesque isolation from the real world ("Reports on Arrests Exaggerated, Says Law Minister") and reprints of every piece of Western sycophancy, however obscure.

Like this from an editorial in the Dominion Daily of Wellington, New Zealand: "The Western tendency to single out Mrs. Gandhi for criticism is grossly unfair . . . In the context of her own society and in what she is trying to do she could eventually emerge as the most outstanding political figure of her own day and age." Occasionally a headline would serve as unintentional prophecy, but it would pass unnoticed as just more doublethink: "Democratic Structure Will Not Be Given Up."

AS THINGS TURNED out, it wasn't. Though Mrs. Gandhi had succeeded in fooling not only herself but almost everybody else until almost the last few weeks of the campaign. You still can't fool all the people all the time. Mrs. Gandhi didn't even fool the majority. The outcome of the election turned India topsy-turvy and stunned the world. In terms of the conventional wisdom, or rather the conventional cynicism, it should never have happened. Lewis Dimon, who was honored by being expelled from India early in Indira's reign and so had to write his post-election analysis from Bangkok, didn't know how to explain it:

"The nation's economy flourished during the 21-month state of emergency and Mrs. Gandhi's political acumen could not be faulted for choosing what seemed to be an opportune moment for elections . . . Thus, when she announced two months ago that elections would be held this week, admirers and critics alike cocked their heads and smiled at the prime minister's cunning political savvy."

INDIA IS A COUNTRY where mass starvation is a constant specter, where 70 per cent of the population is illiterate. It has been explained repeatedly that, in such circumstances, democracy cannot matter to the great masses. Evidently it did. Lewis Simon, peering from Bangkok, could scarcely credit the election returns; "The prime minister's own humiliating defeat in a constituency she swept by over 100,000 votes in 1972, is almost beyond comprehension." Almost. But bring in Factor X, those huddled masses yearning to breathe free, and the result in India becomes not only comprehensible but overwhelming.

Not the least tyrannical aspect of tyranny is that it cons free men into overestimating it. Who would have anticipated such self-respecting news from India, that agglomeration of a subcontinent too often identified with its most sanctimonious, sickening and (usually) self-appointed spokesman?

Well, at least one Indian editor won't be surprised. He's the one who, after his paper was shut down, went out in the country last year to interview the peasants. One of them smiled when asked if he didn't think India was better off than ever. "I can't read," he replied, "but I can think." He could also hear, and while he said he wouldn't vouch for the truth or falsity of the reports over the radio in general, he assured the editor that its coverage of his little district was a pack of lies. Multiply him by millions and the mystery of India becomes comprehensible.

THE ELECTION RETURNS came at a time when the number of democracies on the map seemed to be shrinking away, and a siege mentality began to replace the old hopes. Now those hopes are illumined again. The election results are a victory for democracy everywhere. They are a gift from the people of India.

The dictatorships of the world may seem as strong and bold as the headlines in India News. They may appear invincible — externally. They may continually proclaim that History-Is-With-Us until even free men believe them. They may bulge with nuclear weapons.

But they dare not risk a free election. There is a weakness at the center of their system that cannot stand the mildest criticism. Else why would the all-powerful chairman of The Party in the Soviet Union mount the podium to rant and rave at an expression of concern from the West for an obscure pamphleteer or two in his country? How weak, how vulnerable such tyrannies are at their very core. A single word throws them into a tizzy.

That word is Freedom.

The apathy of parents and taxpayers in Dist. 59 really confuses me. March 8, I attended a meeting at Elk Grove High School along with 749 other taxpayers who are up in arms over whether or not a new unit district should be formed with our tax money. On March 10, I attended a PTO meeting, to which the parents and students of four Junior Highs in Dist. 59 were invited. My daughter and I sat among the 22 other parents and students to hear about the "Vandalism in our schools and What We can do about it."

Last weekend there was $3 to $4 thousand in damages done at Grove Junior High. It costs us taxpayers an allowed budgeted amount of about $31,000 per year to replace just broken windows. Last year a roof had to be replaced to the tune of $20,000, because kids got up on it and poked a few holes in it, which were not discovered until the rains poured in and the entire roof was in ruin.

Now, do the supporters of Unit Dist. 402 really think they are going to get voters out to elect a sound and responsible board when people aren't interested enough to come out to hear what we, as parents, students and taxpayers can do toward easing this burden of high costs.

Just as a point of information — do you know that it costs the taxpayer approximately $30 to put a "Stop" sign back up? To put the stop sign back up on my local corner, about 10 times in the past 2 weeks, it is costing us approximately $300.

He says candidate forum unfair

On March 23, I attended a public forum for all candidates for the office of mayor of Des Plaines. The meeting, at West School, was moderated by two Des Plaines aldermen.

It was my impression that this forum was where one would go to hear and question the potential candidates and that was partly true. However, at times I wasn't sure if I was attending a public forum or a campaign rally for Mayor Bolek.

The aldermen not only permitted him to monopolize the available time, but also made introductory comments about one of the other candidates that were unnecessary and in very poor taste. The crowning blow was the introduction of their candidate as "We have saved the best for the last," which, incidentally brought groans of irritation from the audience.

I don't believe any of the candidates showed up to be embarrassed or ostracized in front of the voting public. It appears to me, though, that the aldermen were trying to do just that.

As a citizen of Des Plaines, I was disgusted with their actions and felt bad for the candidates. I believe they owe the candidates and the public an apology for acting more like political hacks than elected public officials moderating an open public meeting.

Unit plan debate continues

I wish to reply to Mr. Randal C. Melind of Elk Grove Village whose letter The Herald published wherein he expressed his feelings about the unit district. He states that 83,000 copies of a newsletter were sent out to the public and that the $1,200 spent of our tax money could have been better spent to repair the leaking roof at Elk Grove High School. Through the very severe winter the roof at Elk Grove High School did develop two small leaks which have been repaired with one gallon of brush grade tar at the total cost of $2.79.

Mr. Melind's letter is typical of the misinformation being provided to the residents of Dist. 59 by the supporters of the unit district. However, Mr. Melind is correct in his assessment that the money spent by District 214 on printing its special newsletter could have been better spent for education. In fact the money he mentions is but a small part of that which has been spent. Dist. 214 and Dist. 59 have spent in excess of $100,000 on this issue. Dist. 59 has also spent $8,000 on consultants whose entire report consisted of two pages. Mr. Melind also needs to remember that the unit district project originated with a committee of ten and not with Dist. 214. The high school district has legal representatives to protect the interests of all of its taxpayers and all of its children.

John A. Nelson
Building Service Supervisor
Elk Grove High School

ON MARCH 8 I attended the unit district forum at Elk Grove High School, sponsored by the District 59 Community Council. After the presentation segment was given, the moderator, Mr. Domanico asked the audience for questions. I got in line. But when it came my turn a woman in the back came up to Mr. Domanico and they had a short conference. (I later found out that the woman is the president of the Community Council.) She then left and Mr. Domanico said that they made an "impromptu decision" and would not allow anybody to ask questions who was not a registered voter. I being sixteen and not a registered voter was asked to sit down. After considerable disagreement from the audience Mr. Domanico added that the students would be allowed to ask questions after the adults.

The program proceded. After an hour of questioning, the students were informed that we could ask questions. I got in line. Mr. Domanico added that since it was getting late no further people would be allowed to get in line. I had five questions and Mr. Domanico told me earlier that if I had more than one question, after each I would have to go to the end of the line, which sounded quite reasonable. The Herald reported that about 750 attended the Forum. By the time my question was asked about 300 of those people had left.

In essence students were not allowed to ask questions until the end: if a student had more than one question only one could be answered; and by the time students were allowed to ask questions about 300 people had left and the rest were quite tired.

All this leads me to believe that my constitutional right of freedom of speech was violated by the District 59 Community Council. I am totally in favor of what they did to inform the community about the issue of the unit district, but I condemn the frivolous manner in which they treated the students.

Jeff Francione,
Des Plaines

PRESIDENT WOODROW Wilson once said, "A man who won't risk his neck for the country he lives in is not worthy of that country or any of its offices or honors." I feel that way about Elk Grove High School and Dist. 214. For ten years it has been both a privilege and pleasure to teach at Elk Grove High School. An educational atmosphere has prevailed which represents the epitome of cooperation between school board, administration, faculty, students, and the communities of High School Dist. 214. This excellent school district is subject to many unwarranted criticisms by the proponents of a unit school district who have been unwilling and/or incapable of solving the problems of School Dist. 59.

I oppose the district 59 unit formation for the following reasons:

- A unit district is designed to consolidate school systems under one school board and one administration, but in this instance we will still have two. What will happen is that two high schools will be put under Dist. 59.
- We know what we have now, but we don't know what will become of it. In making a judgment on the unit district proposal, voters should look carefully at the records of Dist. 214 and 59. The management, fiscal responsibility, and educaional programs of Dist. 214 are unequalled in Illinois. Contrary to what is being claimed, a two high school district cannot offer the same programs and opportunities for students and teachers that an eight school system can.
- Remember, Dist. 214's programs exist NOW. They have been initiated and implemented by individual schools and a central administration with many years of experience. A central administration with experience in high school programs does not exist in Dist. 59. The proponents should show us the specific educational programs to be offered and the cost of these programs. This information was never presented at the study committee or the formal hearings, and it still has not been presented to the public.
- As to the forthcoming referendum, I would like to remind voters that referendum supporters are making statements based more on speculation than authority. You see, no unit district now exists! There is no Unit Dist. 402 (although Dist. 59 exists, with all its problems). Another question, though, comes to mind: since Dist. 402 does not exist, can the proponents make future commitments for a school board which does not exist . . . unless they know something we do not? Or are they planning now to run the new district, should the referendum pass.

Over the years I have tried to influence young people to believe that the quality of our life depends upon the quality of our leadership and that we must participate in the political process. To be consistent with that philosophy and to maintain respect for what I teach and believe, I oppose the unit district.

Richard Chierico
Elk Grove High School

AFTER READING Patricia Roemish and Delorse Jack's letters (H3/15/77) regarding Dist. 59 voters deciding on the unit District, I get the distinct impression that the issue at hand is "swimming pools" rather than education. If this be the case, I wonder who is kidding who?? My understanding from proponents of the unit District is that Dist. 59 wants its 42 per cent of the high school Dist. 214 budget to provide their residents with a good, solid education. If they really want it for swimming pools, that is another issue! But please, let us not break up a solid high school district if pools are the main concern.

My children attend Prospect, a school older than both Forest View and Elk Grove, and I do not feel them "deprived" because of no pool. They are both in sports activities, and I know the difficulties involved in trying to set up practices and games with so many conflicts, plus the fact that poor weather forces indoor practices into already crowded field houses. But education, if that be the real issue, is not solely measured by field houses and pools! The curriculum offerings are outstanding in 214. In light of this outstanding curriculum I questioned why Mrs. Roemisch's children, in a 214 school, did not have access to the same programs as mine. In fact, when I did some research, I was not surprised to find Forest View and Elk Grove are not as deprived as I was led to believe.

Following are a few "occupational programs" offered in 214, the total district enrollment for each, and the figure for both Forest View and Elk Grove:

- Office Education: Total 123 (F.V. 11; E.G. 21) - 26 per cent of total.
- Home Economics Related Occupations: (HERO) Total 176 (E.G. 34; F.V. 14) 27 per cent total.
- Cosmotology: Total 101 (E.G. 14; F.V. 20) - 33.6 per cent of total.
- Horticulture: Total 86 (E.G. 1; F.V. 15) 18.6 per cent of total.
- Power on Site Training: (POST) Total 44 (E.G. 4; F.V. 19) 52 per cent of total.
- Community Resource: Total 452 (E.G. 50; F.V. 86) 30 per cent of total.

As you can see, a goodly number of students taking advantage of "all the other educational aspects offered in the other part of the district" are from these two schools. If these schools provide 27 per cent of the total enrollment of 214, it does not seem logical, using the above figures, to say they are geting the "short shift."

Peg Kurka
Mount Prospect

YOUR READERS who reside in Dist. 59 bring up some interesting points in their letters in The Herald of March 16. One of them concerns swimming pools, and perhaps it's as well to lay to rest some myths about this issue. First of all the mention of "deprivation" of Elk Grove and Forest View students is a little misleading: they neglect to mention that students at those schools have nearby facilities. They also overlook the fact that not every other 214 school has a pool. And they fail to point out that only two of Dist. 59's own schools (out of 21) have swimming pools. Surely they would call this a glaring example of unequal facilities! And wouldn't they agree that Dist. 59 should first put its own house in order, by building an additional 19 pools, before it begins to criticize a lack of in-schools pool in Forest View and Elk Grove High Schools? And it was not Dist. 214 that objected to building a pool at Elk Grove High School: the idea was objected to and voted down by the Elk Grove Park District. This is another matter of public record which unit district proponents conveniently forget!

Kenneth Portnoy
Elk Grove Village

I READ THE article concerning Elk Grove Twp. Dist. 59 having lower high school entry test scores than other districts.

I am very upset by Supt. Rodger Bardwell for excusing this by saying it is because of the reflection of the "different nature" of the district's population compared to populations in neighboring elementary districts. He explained this by saying, "We have a more diverse population and a broader spectrum of socioeconomic backgrounds." He cited the mobile home parks and the clusters of "low rental and subsidized" apartments within the district.

I am sorry that such a well educated man is so ignorant. Wasn't Abraham Lincoln born to a poor family living in a log cabin? He didn't have to live in an upper-class house to become our president. He was certainly a "different nature," as you would say, Mr. Bardwell, but he attained by his intelligence the highest office in the United States.

Now, may I ask a favor of you, Mr. Bardwell. Please check with our schools and see if possibly you aren't a bit prejudiced against the mobile home park and low rental and subsidized apartment children. I have always felt Dist. 59 was too prejudiced against our children to give them equal education. However, I was very proud and am very proud of their accomplishments, although they were moved from school to school. One attended six different schools in his eight years of elementary education. I would hate to see Dist. 59 having control over Forest View and Elk Grove High Schools, as Dist. 214 has shown no prejudice against our children.

Please, Mr. Bardwell, don't make excuses for lower scores in Dist. 59 at the expense of our children until you know the facts.

Housekeeping is burglar-proof

by DOROTHY MEYER

A couple of weeks ago I wrote a column that started, "By the time you read this I will be soaking up the sun on a beach along the Gulf of Mexico." You didn't see it in print because I was reminded that burglars read newspapers too, and one of them might try to burgle my house while I was gone.

But I don't think it would have hurt to run that column while I was away — there wasn't a loose nickel laying around the place. There never is by the time I head for the airport, and this time I even left three unpaid utility bills sticking in the kitchen window sill.

Those bills, in full view of anyone standing outside, would certainly have discouraged a burglar from thinking he could reap a profit here. And even if he persisted and tried to come in through that window he'd have landed in the kitchen sink. Full of dishes.

IT'S NO SECRET that I'm a terrible housekeeper so I'll admit that even if the burglar survived his sink landing the rest of the house would have convinced him that a brother burglar beat him to it.

But I guarantee he'd never had gotten that far.

It isn't only the kitchen window that's a hazardous entry point. The bedrooms are even worse. The boys' former bedroom is now my "office" and I have to put office in quotation marks because it looks more like a warehouse.

When most boys get married and leave home, they never quite take all their belongings with them. My sons are different — they not only didn't take everything with them, they keep bringing excess stuff back.

THEN THERE'S Marilyn's ex-bedroom which I used for Christmas things last year. I stashed my shopping there, I did my wrapping there and I stored the ornaments and lights there. I also closed it off during the long cold winter and pretty soon I forgot it even existed.

When I came home from my vacation I happened to notice the closed door and opened it out of idle curiosity. What a shock!

Imagine what it would do to a burglar who happened to drop in — he'd drop right back out again and head for the nearest shrink.

ANOTHER CRIME prevention factor is an empty house that never is.

While I was gone, neighborhood kids were in to feed the cat, Marilyn came over to do the dishes and the boys dropped in to dirty a few more. Next-door neighbors were on the alert to see that my kids didn't sneak in to have loud and rowdy parties, and after the neighbors went to bed the kids sneaked in to have loud and rowdy parties.

My final burglar proofing was the cat. He sleeps in the most unlikely and inconvenient places he can find. And he's very mean when stepped on.

Incidentally, I had a lovely vacation.

Labor Dept. actions scrutinized

Pension funds need protection

Clark Mollenhoff

Watch on Washington

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Serious questions are being raised about whether the U.S. Dept. of Labor is providing proper protection for the billions of dollars in pension and welfare funds being accumulated for the benefit of millions of working men and women.

The problem has been highlighted in a recent report by the Senate Permanent Investigations Subcommittee setting out the difficulty in obtaining relevant information in investigations of corrupt and unsound Teamsters Union pension and insurance funds.

And, Senator Robert Griffin (Rep., Mich.) has put the "shocking laxity" in perspective by noting that it appears to be "a repeat" of the manner in which the Labor Department has consistently pulled the teeth of laws passed by Congress to protect the pension funds and insurance benefits of union members and others.

GRIFFIN NOTED that the Taft-Hartley labor law passed in the late 1940s had provisions designed to require a strict accounting for pension and welfare funds by trustees made up of equal numbers of members from management and labor.

At the time of the McClellan Labor Racket Committee investigation in 1957 and 1958 the fund reports "were simply meaningless waste paper gathering dust at the Labor Department," Griffin said.

As a result of those hearings the Landrum-Griffin labor reform law was passed in 1959 to provide for more meaningful reports and for tight and tough enforcement to bar corrupt and convicted persons from having trust responsibilities.

WITHIN A FEW years the intent of the law was forgotten and lax administration and enforcement by the Labor Department, and poor oversight by the Labor Committees of the House and Senate, had eliminated the effectiveness of Landrum-Griffin, Griffin said.

Then in 1974 ERISA was passed with more pledges to put a stop to corruption and mismanagement that had been destroying the integrity of union pension and welfare funds from coast to coast.

Even under the tighter control of ERISA, the Labor Department under the Nixon and Ford administrations took no strong and effective steps to remove Teamsters President Frank E. Fitzsimmons — a White House favorite in those administrations — from his positon as a fiduciary of the union's scandal-ridden Central States pension fund.

BUT INVESTIGATIONS now show that Fitzsimmons was equally lax in failing to protect Teamsters Union locals from the unsound and expensive insurance plan of convicted insurance racketeer Louis Ostrer.

The recent report of the Senate Permanent Investigations Subcommittee stated that Fitzsimmons introduced Ostrer to the executive board of the International Teamsters Union to explain the defective and controversial "Ostrer plan" which Fitzsimmons' son, Donald, was helping to peddle to various Teamsters locals from California to New Jersey.

The report by Acting Chairman Sam Nunn (Dem., Ga.) criticized the Labor Department for failure to develop a management system to police corruption and mismanagement.

"IN ITS CONDUCT of this study, the subcommittee staff found the Labor Department unable to respond efficiently to its request for data on Ostrer-type severance pay-life insurance trust funds," the report said.

When the Labor Department was unable to respond to subcommittee requests for information from the 350,000 annual reports filed by employe benefit plans, the staff concluded that the whole system was ineffective in detecting excessiv expense payments, excessive administrative costs, excessive fees and claims, party-in-interest transactions, transactions with persons of criminal background.

The Senate subcommittee suggested that the General Accounting Office do a complete investigation of Labor's records management practices as they relate to ERISA and make recommendations to give effective protection to pension and welfare funds.

The steps Labor Secretary Ray Marshall has taken to crack down on the Teamsters are commendable, but if they stop there it will be a disservice to the millions who expect and believe that the government is protecting their pensions.

'Russian arms charges inaccurate'

President Carter's chief foreign affairs adviser Friday accused the Soviet Union of making "inaccurate" charges about unsuccessful arms talks in Moscow and warned that Carter will not shut up on human rights to get a new strategic arms agreement. Zbigniew Brzezinski told reporters Carter sought a historic cutback in nuclear arms and even offered to negotiate with the deadly U.S. cruise missile, but the Russians rejected "a giant step" toward capping the arms race.

Keep weaponry, panel urges

The House Armed Services Committee, citing a buildup in Soviet arms, recommended restoration Friday of many weapons cuts asked by President Carter and trimmed money for research on new systems instead. The recommendations were part of a $35.9 billion military procurement bill approved by the panel after two days of closed sessions. Proposed cuts for conventional weaponry — warships and airplanes — were included despite Carter's request that they be cut.

IN DROUGHT-STRICKEN Northern California, water vending machines have become a popular convenience for water conscious shoppers who line up with their own containers to buy the liquid at 20 cents a gallon.

The world

Emergency powers invoked in Brazil

Brazilian President Ernesto Geisel Friday invoked emergency powers and recessed Congress for an indefinite period, setting back by nearly a decade the military's plan to return Brazil to democracy. Geisel, who made the decison after consulting with his National Security Council, was expected to announce further measures Friday. A presidential announcement said Geisel's action was a direct result of Wednesday's congressional vote in which the opposiiton Brazilian Democratic Movement blocked a government-sponsored judicial reform constitutional amendment. Geisel is expected to use his extraordinary powers during the congressional recess to institute wide-ranging political reforms that will diminish the opposition strength and make sure power remains in the hands of the miliary and their successors.

Return of bodies delayed

U.S. embassy and airlines officials in Spain said Friday damage to the runway caused by Sunday's fiery jumbo jet collision may delay until next week the return of the remains of 325 Americans killed in civil aviation's worst disaster. A Pan American official in New York said "Everything is contingent on getting the runway into shape. Our man on the scene said reopening of the runway is still indefinite and massive repairs are still under way." A spokesman for the U.S. embassy in the Canary Islands said deep ruts remained at the site of the collision of a Pan American 747 and a KLM Royal Dutch Airlines 747 which killed 577 in the worst disaster in civil aviation history. He said original plans had been to fly the American dead in wooden caskets today to Dover Air Force Base in Delaware, where further attempts at identification will be made.

Soviet chief in Tanzania

Soviet president Nikolai Podgorny conferred with President Julius Nyerere in Tanzania on the shores of an African lake Friday in a relaxed finish to his 10-day diplomatic offensive to Tanzania, Zambia and Mozambique. The Soviet leader took a last opportunity to discuss with Nyerere the Soviet role in efforts to achieve black majority rule in Rhodesia, South West Africa (Namibia) and South Africa. Podgorny will take in a few hours game watching before he returns to Moscow today. The two presidents conferred at the Lake Manyara hotel. Podgornyy's official visit to Mozambique ended with a public rally in the capital, Maputo, and the signing of a Soviet-Mozambique friendship treaty.

Rhodesian bill for racial change

Rhodesian hotels, bars, nightclubs and restaurants Friday acquired the right — but not the obligation — to serve blacks. The government warned the guerrilla war will "get worse before it gets better" and vowed the white regime "will never give in." The racial change came in the promulgation of a bill amending the Land Tenure Act which eliminates some forms of racial discrimination. In Salisbury, four out of five nightspots checked by telephone said they would let in blacks providing they wear ties and jackets — a requirement for male patrons after dark in Rhodesia. The bill also opens business and commercial land in non-residential urban areas to all races and allows private schools, private hospitals and church institutions to let in blacks.

8-day Jewish holiday Passover starts tonight

"Why is this night different fron all other nights?"

This traditional question will be asked in Hebrew by Jews around the world tonight as they usher in Passover, the holiday that celebrates the Hebrew exodus from Egypt.

The eight-day holiday starts with a seder dinner conducted in the home. A special service read before the meal recounts the story of the Jews slavery in Egypt and their escape to freedom.

The name Passover comes from God's passing over the homes of Jews when he killed the first born of Egypt.

Throughout the holiday, observant Jews don't eat bread. Instead they eat the flat matzo as a remembrance of their ancestors flight from Egypt that did not allow time for bread to rise.

The holiday celebrates freedom, and it is a Jewish tradition to relate the meaning of the festival to modern times. Rabbis teach that Jews should reflect on all kinds of oppression when they hear the story of the exodus from Egypt.

Sunday starts Christian holy week

Worshippers mark the beginning of the holiest week in the Christian church tomorrow on Palm Sunday, the commemoration of Jesus' entrance into Jerusalem.

Citizens greeted Jesus by waving palm branches, thinking that he had come to establish his earthly power. But Jesus rode into the city on a donkey, a symbol of peace.

On Monday Jesus drove the money changers from the temple.

Later in the week, he is believed to have observed the Passover meal. At the Last Supper he entered into a new covenant with his disciples by the breaking of bread and drinking of wine.

He was betrayed by Judas and, while praying in the Garden of Gethsemane, was arrested by soldiers.

Jesus was taken before Pilate, judged and crucified. Good Friday marks the three hours that Jesus suffered on the cross.

He was taken to the tomb Friday night. Jewish law would have prohibited the handling of the body on the Saturday sabbath.

On Sunday, the women went to the tomb and found the stone had been rolled away and that Jesus was not there. They returned to tell the story to dispirited disciples.

Palm Sunday and Easter Sunday are two of the biggest church attendance days in the Christian year.

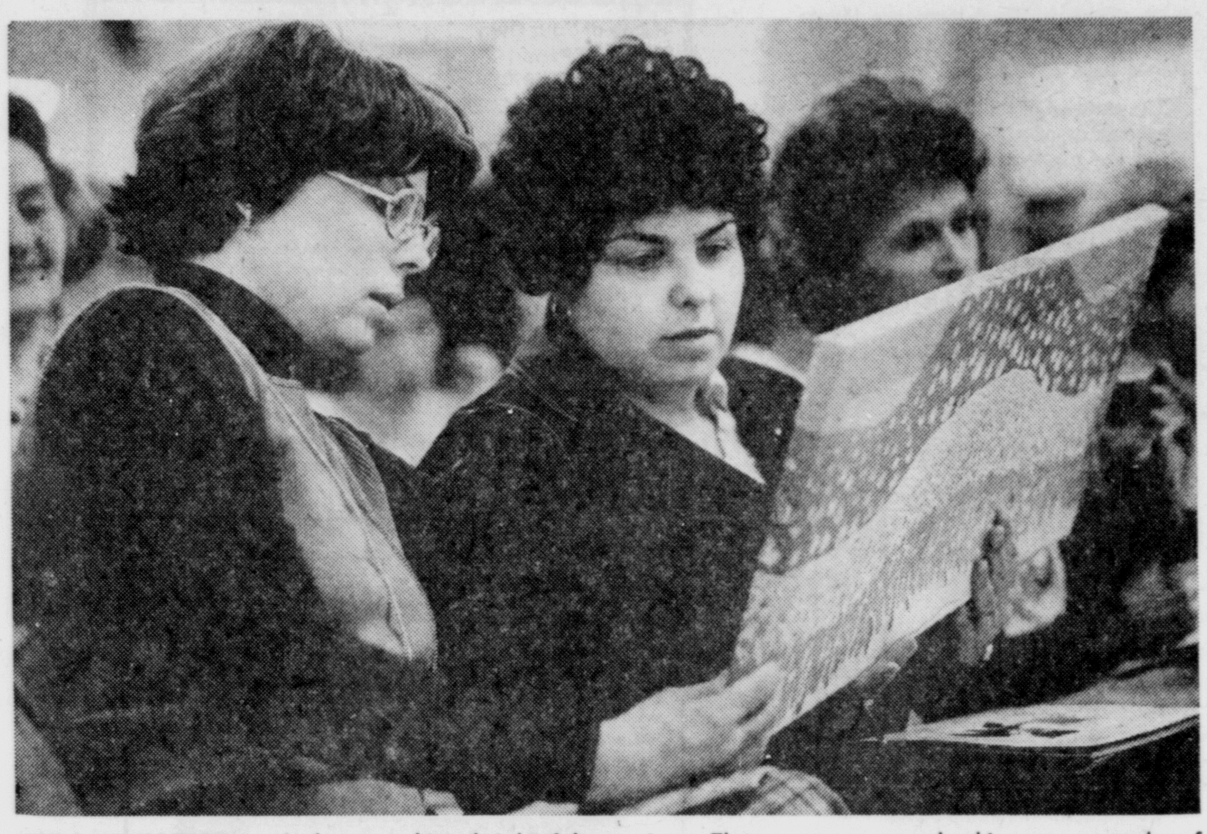
If you can't afford art, hang fabric



WALL HANGINGS made by stretching bright fabrics over wooden frames are becoming popular among young buyers looking for art at reasonable prices. These women are checking an example of the easy-to-make project at a recent Carson Pirie Scott craft demonstration in Randhurst.

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

If your artistic tastes have passed the Farrah Fawcett-Majors pinup stage but your pocketbook hasn't reached the Merrill Chase league, fabric stretching could be the answer to filling the stark white expanse of a new apartment.

Whether fabrics are turned into art prints via wooden frames, stapled across an entire wall as instant wall paper, or pasted on a lampshade for a change of pace, bright geometric and floral fabrics are popular items with young apartment dwellers who want original art at a price that still leaves room for furniture.

Stretched fabrics appeal to young buyers who want a compromise between college posters and expensive originals and who are "open-minded enough to realize that it's art," said Dan Bronovik, manager of Form, a Scandinavian furniture co-op in Schaumburg.

THE COTTON BLEND fabrics at Form are manufactured in Finland and Sweden and range from $7-$13 a yard. Though the fabrics have been purchased for everything from wall paper to bedsheets, the most popular variations are wall haingings constructed by stretching fabric over wooden artist frames.

At an average cost of $15-$20 each, fabric wall hangings "require no technical expertise whatever," said Bronovik. All that's needed is an hour or so, a staple gun, wood frames and the fabric, which is stretched onto the frame by starting at the center of each side and stapling out to the corners.

Prints may be grouped singly or in clusters that repeat a pattern from one frame to the next, Bronovik said. Once the fabric is on the frames, a commercial spot lifter or an occasional vacuuming will take care of any dust or dirt on the fabric itself, he added.

The fabrics at stores like Form and Marshall Field's often feature a specific subject such as a skyline, a field of zebras, or bright fish, but bedsheets with smaller, more general patterns also are being used as wall art, said Christine Bottomley, home fashions coordinator for Martex, a company which manufactures bed linens and towels. Ms. Bottomley was at Carson Pirie Scott and Co. in Randhurst recently to demonstrate the use of sheets in low-cost home decorating.

THOUGH SHEETS have been used outside the bedroom for several years, the concept is gaining in popularity because sheets are less costly than ready-made wallpaper, lampshades or tablecloths, she said.

Round tablecloths and napkins may be standard innovations by now, but the more advernturesome can still be the first on their block to dig out staple guns, vinyl wall paste and king size sheets and transform a livingroom wall into an expanse of green grass or red checks, she added.

Fabric can be applied to the wall with either staples or a vinyl to wall paste, but a white or off-white wall that is free of any obvious cracks is an important prerequisite. Sheets with a random design are best for matching if more than one is required to fill the wall, she said.

If several hours of pasting, smoothing and trimming don't sound appealing, an hour and a half will suffice for a covered lampshade, said Ms. Bottomely.

"All it takes is a little practice," she said. And whether they're opting for a framed fish or a lilac lampshade, young singles and couples are taking her advice.

Wild flower garden imitates nature

George Creed

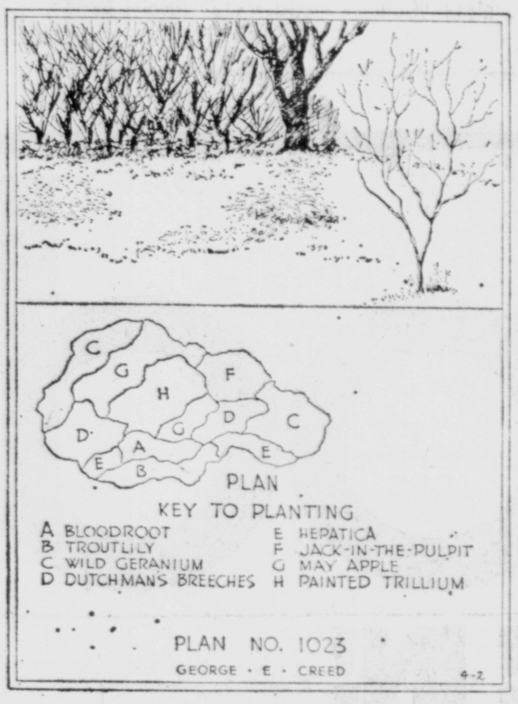
It's your landscape

It is extremely difficult to imitate nature successfully. When you walk through a woods, everything seems to be helter-skelter. There doesn't seem to be any rhyme or reason in the arrangement of plants, but there is.

If you observe very carefully, you will see certain types of plants growing in colonies where the shade is heavy and the soil is moist. Not far away, you will see different kinds of plants where the forest cover is lighter — where more sunshine finds its way to the forest floor.

On the outer edges of the woods you will discover plants that differ greatly from those within the forest. In the open fields, you will see wild flowers with life cycles adapted to full sunlight; these require considerable sun in order to thrive.

ONE PECULIARITY OF many wild flowers is that they go through complete life cycles — from growth to flowering to seed-producing — before the leaves of the trees around them develop fully to make heavy shade.



In the arrangement of plants, one thing you don't find in nature is straight lines. If you do find plants in a row, it is most certainly accidental. Nor is there, in nature, any uniformity in the way plants are spaced.

The accompanying plan shows an arrangement of wild flowers that is somewhat like that which you might find in nature. Note the irregularity of groups and the variations in the sizes of groups.

Most of the common wild flowers in the plan are hardy and easy to culture. They do require some shade and a moist, humus-like soil, varying in acid reaction from 5 to 7 pH.

If you plan to grow wild flowers, first study them in their natural habitats. But, don't remove them unless they are in an area through which a road is planned or in which a subdivision or other development is to be made. Instead get your plants from a nursery that specializes in the growing of wild flowers.

One advantage of buying from a nurseryman is that he will be able to furnish you with detailed advice about when and where to plant your wild flowers and how to culture each species you order.

Q. I have a ginkgo tree that sends up sucker shoots. Could I dig these up, plant them and expect them to develop into trees?

A. Yes, but be sure to get as much root system with each shoot as you can.

Q. When is the best time to plant roses?

A. In the spring, after the frost is out of the ground but before the roses start new growth.

The best plan.
The best place.

Plan provides two-family living

Jean-Paul Saint-Michel

Home of your own

The tough job of finding a home within budget limitations can be largely avoided by building this two-family dwelling. it has been specifically designed as an income producer and at the same time offers complete privacy to both occupants.

The one-bedroom apartment is on the lower level of this home. It has its own separate front entrance — a big plus compared to other designs having a common interior foyer with separate doors leading into the two units. Also, there is a side entrance.

The apartment has a large living room, a corner of which is used for a kitchenette. Decorative folding doors enclose these facilities, completely transforming the appearance. A bedroom and bath are to the rear. Note that the bath with its two entrances can be used as a private bath from the bedroom, or as a guest bath from the living room.

A SIDE PORCH also is provided for the apartment, which actually is a continuation of the wraparound front porch of the house. Privacy again is assured by the brick wall separating the two outdoor living facilities.

Let us take another look at the possibilities for this two-room unit. Besides being living quarters for a teacher or young married couple, it also could be used as a professional suite. A doctor, dentist or attorney, for example, could easily use the rental space efficiently. The living area could become the waiting or outer office, and the bedroom, the examination or private office. In this case, the side door could be used for clients' access to maintain the privacy of the other unit.

On the other hand, the owner of the main unit could use the apartment as his business office, whether he be a professional or not. In this case, the portion of the house being used as office space (528 sq. ft.) could be used as an income tax deduction.

TO CARRY THE versatility a step further, the apartment could be the most intelligent approach for a family having the responsibility of providing shelter for in-laws. The complete facilities could mean living tranquility for both families.

The other portion of the house has, on the next highest level, the living room, dining, kitchen and breakfast room. Down four steps from the breakfast area and along a railed-typed arrangement is the family room.

On the upper level there are three bedrooms and a bathroom; all bedrooms have exceptional closet space.

The exterior of this home has all the appearances of a single-family home. Even the existence of the two front doors does not detract from this image.

Brick and wood shingles are used on the exterior in conjunction with a bow window, wood double hung windows and Dutch-type doors.

Chicago Flower show needs a housecleaning

Mary B. Good

Potting shed

The best time to enjoy the quiet solitude of the Chicago Flower and Garden Show is between the hours of 2 and 5 a.m. on the eighth day of the week.

Don't get me wrong. The Chicago Flower and Garden Show is the big spring floral fling, and anybody who grooves on plants shouldn't miss it.

But the legions of showgoers multiply each year, as more and more people get into plants, and the show has evolved to the point that it can be compared to a Chinese fire drill.

Take someone who has fallen in love with gardening, has never before witnessed the Chicago Flower Show, and is willing to travel — maybe even hundreds of miles — to experience this rare treat. He or she is entertaining thoughts of seeing a vast array of the finest specimens of greenery in an ethereal setting. He wants to respond to the visual beauty, be educated regarding plant culture, acquire some hard-to-find green goodies. Then whamo! He is devastated by the negative aspects of the show.

IT IS INCOMPATIBLE with the romance of flowers to be jostled, poked, prodded, trampled, trounced by the hassle, as well as the trying quality of misplaced hawkers selling products totally unrelated to gardening.

An aspirin company would make a fortune if it put in a booth at the show. And why not? Everyone else and his brother has one. Doesn't every garden show need hucksters selling plastic refrigerator-door magnets, organs and pianos, demonstrators of food blenders, magnetic window washing gadgets, Indian jewelry, windup toys, blow bubble twitters, Kewpie dolls and other similar trivia? And another exhibition, not even part of the flower show, swallowed up about one-third of the previous floor space.

CONGESTION COULD be improved with the elimination of exhibitors not associated with the garden industry, thus leaving open space for visitors to negotiate around the place. And a better traffic pattern would eliminiate people bumping and banging into each other.

Instead of squashing booths that sell plants into tight quarters, management could integrate the plant booths in and around the display gardens, and spread out the plant booths so they don't have long lines waiting to purchase their greenery. Plant booths are a very definite attraction because the variety of plants for sale is enormous. Their presence eliminates running all over the city to compare prices and buy special plants.

BUT THERE SHOULD be special egress for those who purchase plants so they don't have to worry about getting their plants and themselves out of the show in one piece. As it is, many persons don't buy plants because of the congestion. Many couldn't even go down aisles where most of the green plant and flower sellers were located.

It is physically exhausting for the average person to submit to the stress of prodding and pushing through a parade of people.

CREDIT SHOULD GO to garden exhibitors who make the safari year after year, despite the problems they encounter, to bring show-goers the best they have to offer at one of the world's largest indoor plant expositions. And their best is superb. Their plant material is choice, beautiful and in a price comparison often a good buy.

But the same thing has happened to the flower show that has happened to everything else in our world. It needs purification, redefining of purpose, better organization. Away with the superfluous!

If you can't enjoy the rewarding experience of something with the potential and value of the Chicago Flower Show — and — it is the greatest commingling of the plant world in a Midwesterner's annual calendar — then it is an exercise in frustration.

THE VAST ARRAY of flowers decking walkways and buildings at the Chicago Flower Show call for a leisurely pace to fully appreciate them, but crowds at recent shows make that often impossible.

Comfort first

A shelter magazine that surveyed its subscribers for their views on buying furniture and home furnishings found they were primarily influenced by comfort and durability. They ranked price ninth, and brand names, 13th. Durability was also the leading factor in carpet purchasing decisions, the study showed. Figures from the Better Homes and Gardens Consumer Panel indicated furniture and carpet purchases were joint huband-wife decisions. (UPI).

Ukrainian egg coloring celebrates Easter

by VALERIE BERG

Coloring Easter eggs is not just kids' stuff. To the Ukrainians, it is an important tradition.

One Ukrainian saying is that the more colored eggs one has, the better person he is, says Mary Winiecki of Palatine. Like other women of Ukrainian ancestry, Mary practices the custom of dyeing Easter eggs, or pysanky, as they are called in the native language.

Unlike the Easter eggs children dye in this country, pysanky take much more time and skill to decorate. The multicolored designs, made up of geometric shapes, animals, plants and other symbols, have special meanings.

THE UKRAINIAN tradition of egg dyeing dates from the days before Christ and has been passed down from mother to daughter. The egg, a symbol of fertility and life, is decorated to celebrate the renewal of life in the spring. Other pagan folk beliefs granted eggs the power to avert evil, bring good crops and help maidens win the men they loved.

The dyeing process is intricate and can take up to several hours for one egg, depending upon the compexity of the design. The eggs can be decorated raw or the insides may be blown out through a pinhole. Before being decorated, eggs must be room temperature and are washed in a water and vinegar solution.

Designs are drawn with a kistka, or stylus, which consists of a metal funnel attached to a stick. The funnel is heated in a candle flame, then dipped into the beeswax, which flows through the funnel like ink. The decorator writes or draws wax designs on the egg, then dips it into a yellow dye. The wax-covered portion of the egg remains white.

The decorator draws more wax designs on the egg, then dips it into green or orange dye. These wax-covered sections will remain yellow. This waxing and dyeing process is repeated using successively darker colors until the entire egg is covered with wax drawings or the darkest coat of dye.

WHEN ALL OF THE colors have been applied, the egg is held next to the candle flame or heated briefly in the oven until the wax melts. The melted wax is wiped off to reveal the colorful, intricate designs underneath. A coating of varnish or shellac may be applied to give the egg a glossy finish.

The egg-dyeing is strictly women's work, Mary says, while men and boys carve and paint wooden eggs. The wooden eggs often are given to children who would be likely to break the real eggs.

The finished eggs are never eaten, but are saved for an indefinie number of years. They must be exposed to the air to keep from exploding. The inside of the egg will dry out over time without spoiling.

Pyansky, along with boiled eggs dyed in one color called krashanky, are included in the baskets of food blessed by the priest on Easter morning. After mass, pysanky are exchanged among parishioners and the krashanky are eaten at the Easter meal.

IN MANY UKRAINIAN homes, the pysanky are displayed at other times of the year for non-Ukrainian guests, or are given as presents. "This is something to brag about," Mary says with a chuckle.

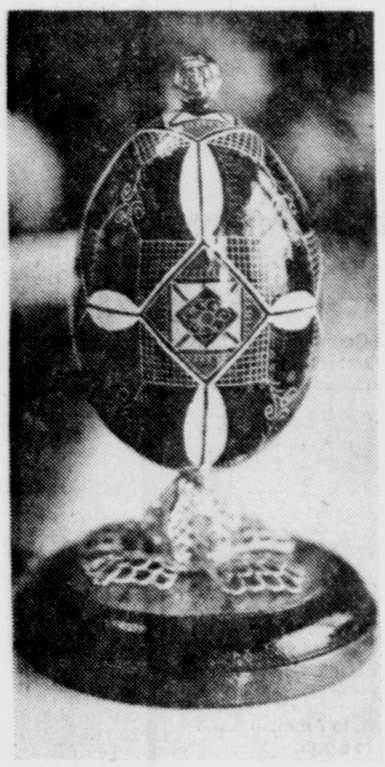
She explains that in Europe, eggs with special designs are given as gifts for certain occasions. Boys give girls eggs with flower designs (a symbol of love) and in exchange girls give their favorite boys their prettiest eggs. Farmers exchange eggs with animal designs to ensure healthy livestock and eggs with wheat to guarantee a good harvest.

Eggs bear many other designs. Evergreen trees symbolize eternal youth and health; hens, chickens and roosters symbolize fertility; ladders and rakes are combined into geometric patterns to represent prosperity; triangles represent the Trinity; and the endless lines and ribbons encircling the eggs represent eternal life.

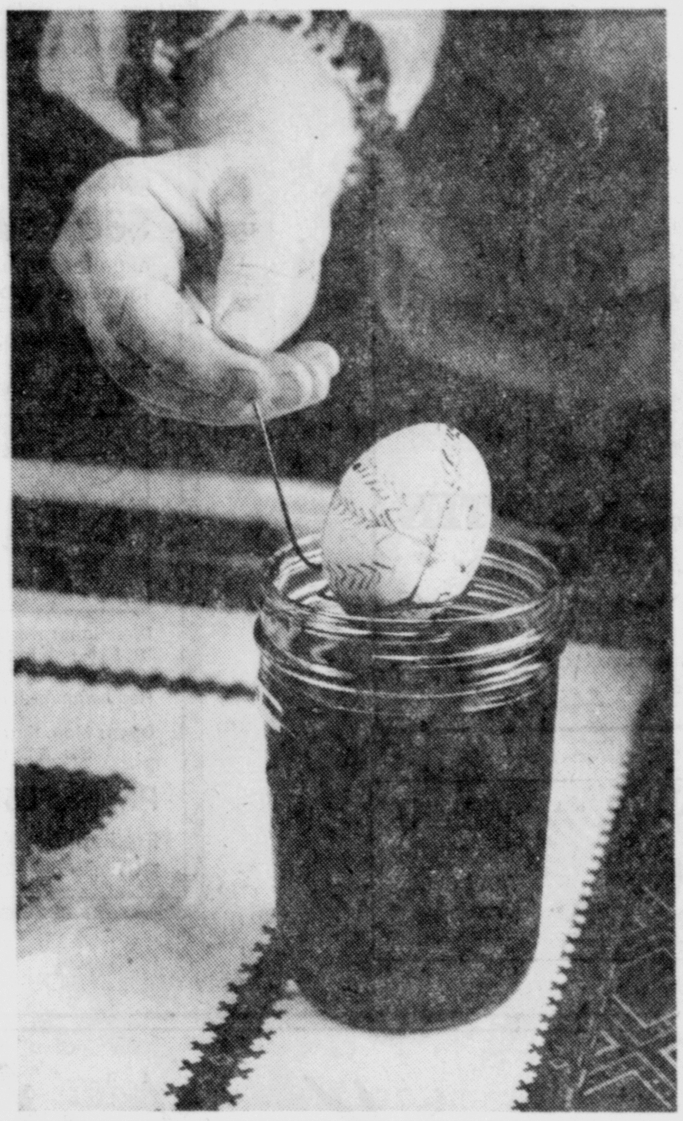
Time-consuming though it may be, the tradition of egg-dyeing persists in the United States. One Ukrainain tale suggests why the custom has survived.

According to the tale, the fate of the world depends upon the pysanka. As long as the tradition remains and the eggs continue to be decorated, the world shall exist. But should the custom cease, the forces of evil will encompass and destroy the world.

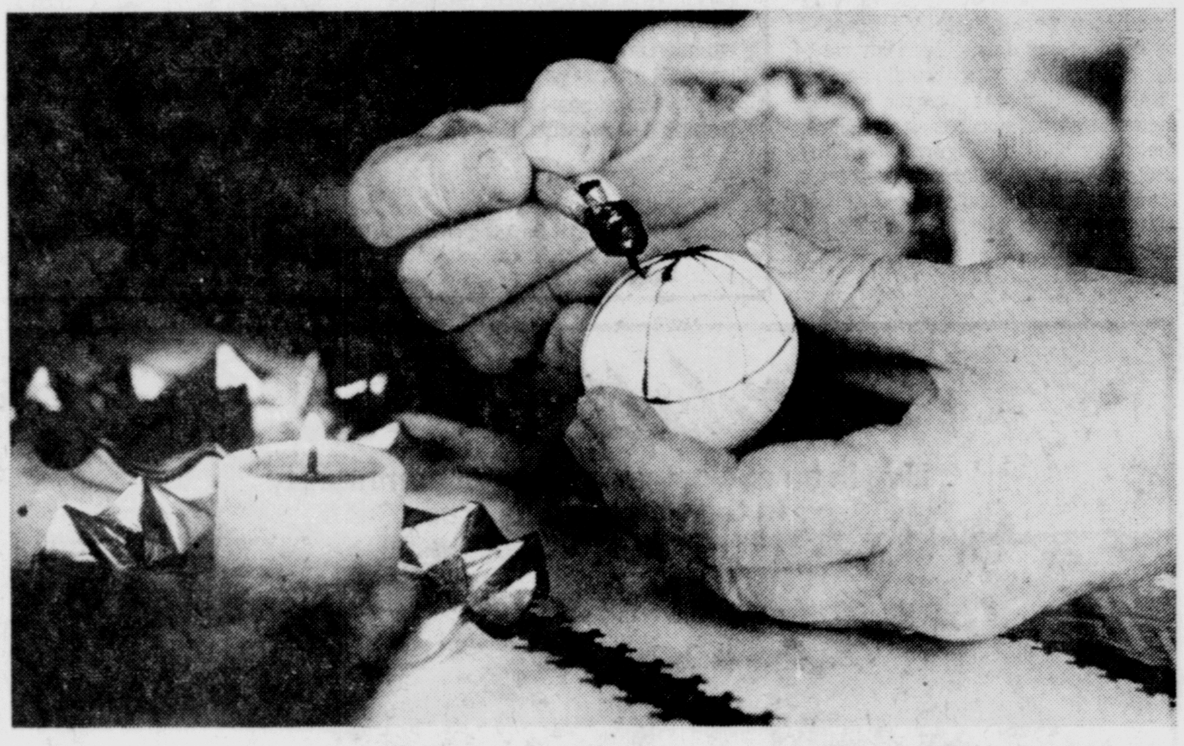
Mary Winiecki's holiday table displays her handiwork of many Easters past.



Designs can be complex.



The egg is dipped into successively darker dyes.



A kistka, or stylus, is used to draw wax designs on the egg.

Wood back in style for home furniture

RICH BUTTERNUT and gray elm woods are shaped into a handsome group, "Theses," by designer Roland Carter for Hickory Manufacturing Co.

Consumers sometimes seem kinky. Currently, many are raising their voices about the conservation of our forests, protection of our natural resources and wildlife. At the same time there is a tremendous upsurge of interest in home furnishings fashioned from "natural" materials, such as wood, rattan, grass wallcoverings and floor coverings. Is there a paradox here?

It does seem so on the surface. But actually the wood used in most furniture made on the North American continent is wood grown as a product. That means tree farms are producing and replanting large stands of pine, pecan, oak and maple.

MANUFACTURERS BUY the already milled lumber and some designers have learned to use even "sick" lumber rather than discard it. Some of the popular Ponderosa pine woods have unusual patterning due to a little pest that chews away part of the soft wood. Once that pest expires, the wood just dries, and the tree crashes to the forest floor.

Now mill owners know how to identify those particular trees and cut them back before they damage neighboring stands of pines. And furniture makers eagerly buy the wood!

The rattans and reeds generally are grown in tropical climates, such as Malaysia and the Philippines. Again there are whole plantations devoted to the culture of these unique, bendable young tree forms.

THERE ARE SOME rarer woods, such as rosewood, teak and African shedua. These are used for special finishing purposes, decorative trim or veneers. So the manufacturer may put the strength of oak into the structural elements, and the beauty of rosewood into the highlights, such as door panels. This in itself is a form of conservation, brought about by price factors.

Wood is definitely taking a precedence over man-made materials in today's market. The illustration used today features one nicely handled concept called "Thesis," made by Hickory Manufacturing Co.

When designer Roland Carter approached the problem of creating a table that would serve everyday needs and still perform as a party servant, he began with rich butternut and gray elm woods.

Graining becomes an important design aspect in the group, as he utilizes the patterns of grain in gently formed armrests and backrests on the mobile chairs. The two-door, four-drawer chest also gets its share of grain patterning.

When woods star, as in this group, there's little need for competitive patterns in upholstery and drapery fabrics. So a low-key, gleaming look prevails.

Paper towels tops as household aid

According to a recent national survey the most heavily used household aid in America is probably the disposable paper towel.

Paper towels are present in 95 per cent of American homes, the survey revealed, with 25 per cent of the homemakers interviewed stating that they use paper towels around the house 10 times a day or more. (UPI)

The doctor says

Movie misleading on brain surgery

My friend and I saw the movie "One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest." Is it true that our mental institutions give operations on the brain as they show to make the patients more obedient? Also the shock treatments look so brutal. Why do they give shock treatments and are they as the movie shows them to be?

My friend is from Czechoslovakia and said she wanted very much to see the movie because it is directed by one of her fellow countrymen who was deported.

Please, please comment on this as it is very disturbing to me to wonder about our own mental institutions and how and who runs them.

Movies and TV are very effective opinion molders — even so-called objective newscasts. I can see the movie has had that effect on you.

No, operations on the brain are not used to make patients more obedient. That is pure fiction and no doubt millions of viewers have been misled as you have been.

Years ago an operation called the prefrontal leukotomy was done to cut large parts of the frontal lobes of the brain from the rest of the brain. This did modify behavior. A related operation is still done today involving about a centimeter of the brain where personality is affected. Such an operation is done only in extreme situations where the patient is so uncomfortable with his anxiety-type reactions that he is totally incapacitated. It is not done to control the patient's behavior but to relieve him from discomfort. The patieht must give his consent if he is able to, and if he is not, his nearest relative or those legally responsible must do so. It is nothing like depicted in movie.

Electric shock treatments are used primarily to treat depressions. You may not be aware of how uncomfortable and unhappy a depressed patient can be — so depressed that he may be suicidal. Depression and manic depression can be very dangerous to the patient. Electric shock used properly can relieve such reactions and can be life saving. Shock therapy relieves the patient's suffering. That is what medicine is supposed to do whether it is a pill for painful arthritis or shock therapy for total despair and misery.

MODERN ELECTRIC shock therapy is not brutal. The patient is given a muscle relaxant so that the muscles hardly move in response to the electric current. He is also given a sedative or anesthetic so he is almost unaware of the procedure. Untrained observers may not notice the mild convulsive like response, it is so minimal. It would certainly not make a very dramatic movie scene. The results of such treatment in properly selected cases can be quite dramatic.

New medicines to control or modify patient behavior are so effective that there would be no reason to use either surgery or shock treatments for such purposes. So, a good movie from an entertainment point of view is not very good from a point of view of teaching the public anything about modern psychiatric treatment. Unfortunately many viewers will not separate entertaining fiction from reality.

Answer obscene calls with instant hang-up

Dear Dorothy: I've heard about obscene phone calls, but never experienced it myself until this week. The foul-mouthed person kept at it for four calls and I was frantic. The phone company couldn't help. Surely, with all the modern methods, ways can be found to trace and arrest these perverts. You should help through your column.—H.W.

I don't know what you did, but the best advice is to hang up the moment you understand what is being said. The sick people who call seem to get kicks out of those who snap back or appear confused. The instant hang-up has been found to be the best weapon one has. But if there is persistent annoyance over days, the phone company will help by monitoring the line. When such callers are traced and found guilty the penalties are stiff.

Dear Dorothy: This suggestion may be of help to those who have carpeting in their bathrooms that cannot be laundered easily. I use old bath mats, cut in half, then cut in about six inches to contour to the "john." It's a good way to use up old mats which are easy to throw into the washing machine. And, best of all, it keeps the rest of the carpeting odor-free.—Mrs. Alma G. Heuer

Dear Dorothy: A reader asked for a quick and easy tartar sauce. If one doesn't have sour cream on hand, but does a jar of sandwich spread, a little fresh or reconstituted lemon juice added to taste makes a very good emergency tartar sauce.—Mrs. M. Skinner

Dear Dorothy: I love mushrooms, but can't stand the thought of washing all that manure in which they are grown into my sink. Besides, it still always looks murky. I know I'm being squeamish. How to wash them?—Martha Kannapell

I'd say more than a "bit" squeamish! Mushrooms are grown under pretty good conditions. They're put in carefully treated compost over which is a covering of casing soil. The compost generates its own heat as it breaks down into the nutrients necessary for the growth of this delectable fungi. Most people just wipe the mushrooms with a damp towel and cut off only the end of the stem. I've never gotten over the habit of rinsing them and drying them in a paper towel. I'm talking about the fresh, white mushrooms available the year round.

U.S. unemployment down to 7.3%, Chicago area jobless rate up 0.2%

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Many laid off workers returned to their jobs as the severe winter weather ended in March, causing unemployment to fall to a post-recession low of 7.3 per cent, the U.S. Labor Dept. said Friday.

The 0.2 per cent decline brought joblessness down to a benchmark set in January before a large part of the nation was hit by unusually cold weather. Unemployment has never fallen below 7.3 per cent since the economy began to recover from the depths of the recession in 1975.

Meanwhile, the Illinois Dept. of Labor announced that an increase in Chicago area unemployment was responsible for keeping the statewide March unemployment figure at 6 per cent. The statewide unemployment rates for the first two months of 1977 were 5.8 per cent in January and 6 per cent in February.

THE DEPARTMENT said unemployment in the six-county Chicago area rose slightly from 5.4 per cent to 5.6 per cent in March despite downstate decreases.

Economists viewed the March figures as proof the bad weather did not impair the nation's recovery.

"It's encouraging that we've seemed to survive the January weather and things weren't as bad as we thought they might be," said chief U.S. Commerce Dept. economist Courtenay Slater. "At the same time, the growth rate is not as strong as it ought to be."

The nation's joblessness averaged 7.4 per cent in the first quarter of 1977, showing little improvement from a year ago.

"All of these rates are still at unprecedented high levels by historical standards," remarked Julius Shiskin, head of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

BAD WEATHER and related energy shortages were blamed entirely in February for interrupting a steady unemployment decline from 8 per cent last November. Likewise, last month's developments were attributed solely to warmer weather.

About 7.1 million persons were unemployed in March. The decline occurred primarily among adult men who were victims of weather-related layoffs.

Employment, meanwhile, rose for the fifth straight month to 89.5 million, an increase of about 500,000 over February. This meant 56.7 per cent of the nation's population had jobs — the highest percentage in 29 months.

The employmeent expansion outpaced a 400,000 increase in the labor force. Factory payrolls increased by 165,000 as many plants reopened afteer the cold spell, and spring brought a 95,000 increase in construction jobs.

Fresh look at India'seconomy needed

Louis Rukeyser

NEW YORK — This is one of the loveliest times of the year in New Delhi. The weather has grown warm, and there is no hint of the mugginess that will squat on the city during the summer monsoon.

One hopes devoutly that this pleasant floral season wil prove an apt metaphor for the condition of the Indian people, too. Certainly it seems like springtime for Indian democracy, a cherished condition that was set aside a bit too easily by Indira Gandhi and has not been reclaimed dramaticallwy by her erstwhile serfs. But the current euphoria over the unseating of the quasi-queen will inevitably vanish if the new rulers do not deal vigorously with the problems of the Indian ecomony.

India's economy has been described as a permanent crisis. Hundreds of millions of largely illiterate citizens, 80 per cent of them living village lives out of another century, with an average annual income estimated (optimistically) at $90 — this overcrowded, underdeveloped nation would have enormous difficulties even under the best of economic policies. Unfortunately, it has time and again opted for some of the worst.

ECONOMICS, as such, does not appear to have been a prime issue in the overthrow of Mrs. Gandhi. Her newly merged opposition is said to have emphasized safer themes: a repudiation of her authoritarian rule and curtailment of civil rights, an end to the allegedly sinister influence of her unpopular son Sanjay, a halt to excessive zeal in the campaign to sterilize men. All fine ideas — but scarcely persuasive clues to the economic direction of the new government.

Americans should not expect too much. There is reason for some hope in the return of a leader like Morarji R. Desai, whose earlier days as finance minister appeared to be guided by a conviction that socialism was a splendid policy as long as you didn't take it too seriously.

But while the emphasis may change, some others now returning to power were willing advocates of policies that discouraged foreign investment — which could have helped immensely the lot of the typical villager — and doggedly pursued the discredited doctrines of socialism. India has never really known two-party government, and the new leadership could easily splinter, early and bitterly. Those all over the world who believe that it is better to vote than to shoot will hope for India's success, but such success will be elusive unless the new leaders focus on India's economic failures as incisively as they aleady have exploited the political.

Self-serve gas by official rule seen

State Sen. John Roe, R-Rochelle, Friday said he expects Gov. James R. Thompson to use his executive powers to permit self-service stations to begin operating in Illinois. Roe told a radio reporter that he was not "altogether certain that the passage of a bill is going to be necessary" to permit self-service in the state. "I've been reliably informed," Roe said, "that within the next two weeks the executive department which is under control of the governor may be announcing an administrative rule change which will, in effect, legalize self-service gas stations without the necessity of legislative action."

Conrail no-strike order extended

A federal judge Friday approved an agreement to extend a temporary no strike order he issued two days ago until May 3. U.S. District Judge Charles R. Weiner approved the agreement worked out between counsel for Conrail and System Federation No. 1, which represents the coalition of four unions. Conrail has asked the judge for a no-strike injunction. The agreement came shortly after the federation, blocked from striking Conrail last Wednesday by Weiner's order, filed a counter claim against the firm. The suit sought a total of $1 million in damages because of the nationwide layoff of 1,200 workers, which prompted the threatened walkout. While the extension is in effect, both sides will attempt to resolve the layoff dispute. A progress report is to be made to the judge next month.

Kar lists $7 million sales

Kar Products, Inc., Des Plaines, has reported sales of $7,633,325 during the three months ended Feb. 28. Net income totaled $545,697 or 31 cents a share for the period, said Norman Arroyo, president.

Retail merchants meeting set

The Illinois Retail Merchants Assn. has scheduled its annual meeting April 13-14 at Nordic Hills, Itasca. The theme for the conference is, "The Customer," said Hugh Muncy, association president. Among the conference speakers will be Gov. James R. Thompson and Robert Froehlke, president of Health Insurance Assn. of America.

Plant engineer conference in May

Approximately 25,000 plant engineers and other visitors are expected to attend the 28th annual National Plant Engineering & Maintenance Conference at Chicago's McCormick Place May 9-12. Conferences and exhibits will feature lighting efficiency, cost controls, pollution controls and other topics. A Design Engineering Show and American Society of Mechanical Engineers Design Engineers conference will be conducted on the same days at McCormick Place. Howard Carter of Mobil Oil Corp's Schaumburg office is among the plant engineering conference speakers.

Economic reports drive Dow up

NEW YORK (UPI) — Favorable employment and construction reports sparked bargain hunting Friday that drove prices of New York Stock Exchange issues higher in moderate trading in the wake of a sharp three-month slide.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which plunged 85.52 points in the first quarter ended Thursday, gained 8.23 points to 927.36, the best showing since it rose 10.64 points March 14. For the week, however, it lost 1.50 points.

The NYSE common stock index gained 0.41 to 53.94 and the average price of a common share increased by 25 cents.

Advances topped declines, 968 to 440, among the 1,842 issues crossing the composite tape.

Big Board volume totaled 17,050,000 shares, up from the 16,510,000 traded Thursday.

Composite volume of NYSE, issues traded on all exchanges at 4 p.m. EST totaled 19,997,740 shares, compared with 18,218,208 Thursday.

Under proposed law

Taxes would go into peace fund

It is income tax time and in addition to the usual wrestling with Form-1040, some Christians are wrestling with the moral problems raised with where the money goes that they pay in taxes.

It is a problem as recent as the Vietnam War and as old as Quaker activist William Penn: Can a society devise a means of "selective" objection that allows conscientious people the refusal to participate in matters that compromise their moral, conscience-formed principles?

In the question of taxes, the problem is that large numbers of people, especially those members of churches such as the Quakers, Church of the Brethren and Mennonites, object to their taxes going to the defense budget.

David E. Anderson

World of religion

THE REV. RICHARD McSorley, S.J., a professor of theology at George town University, summed up the dilemma felt by these Christians during House Ways and Means Committee hearings a year ago:

"If I give a man money to buy a gun, and I know he is planning to murder you, I am in part responsible for your murder. Likewise, if I give a government money to kill in my name, I am responsible for the killing that the government does."

To resolve this moral dilemma, the National Council for World Peace Tax Fund has suggested that there be an alternative for conscientious objectors who still want to pay their taxes.

As the title of their organization suggests, the alternative is a Peace Tax Fund, under which people would be able to designate the portion of their tax that would normally go into the defense budget instead be put into a fund that would finance "peace projects."

LEGISLATION CALLING for the fund has been introduced in the Senate by Sens. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., and Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, and in the House by Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Calif., with some 20 cosponsors.

In introducing the legislation, Hatfield said that "for a number of years I have wrestled with the issue of requiring taxes for current military outlay from people conscientiously opposed to war."

"It is now my strong conviction that I should introduce this legislation to permit citizens opposed to war on moral or theological grounds the opportunity to have that portion of their income, estate and gift taxes normally spent by the military directed to peace-related activities instead," Hatfield said.

Hatfield, basing his figures on the membership of the traditional peace churches such as the Brethren, Mennonites and Friends and a survey on the nation's attitude toward conscientious objection, estimated that somewhere between half of 1 per cent to 9 per cent of the taxpayers would use the Peace Fund.

SUCH USAGE, he said, would create a fund of between $180 million and $4.5 billion.

Under the proposed legislation, the fund would be modeled after such agencies as the National Highway Trust Fund. The President would appoint a board of citizens to administer the fund and make the disbursements "to programs of a peace-related nature."

In addition to the traditional peace churches, the Peace Fund proposal has also picked up the support of the non-pacifist 10-million member United Methodist Church and the Roman Catholic "Call to Action" conference.

While the proposal is given only the slimmest of all chances to be enacted in the near future, its proponents are not discouraged and believe that an important debate on the nature of religious freedom in American society has at last been joined.

Carter orders sale of the 'Sequoia'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter has asked Defense Sec. Harold Brown to sell the presidential yacht, Sequoia, saying it costs taxpayers $800,000 a year and is "unjustified and unnecessary," the White House announced Friday.

Deputy Press Sec. Rex Granum, confirming an earlier report, said the yacht is valued at between $200,000 and $400,000 and will be put on the public market.

The Sequoia, which has been in the hands of the government since the Hoover administration in 1930, carries a crew of 59 and costs $700,000 a year in salaries and $100,000 annually for maintenance.

GRANUM SAID the crew, 49 from the Navy and 10 from the Coast Guard, will be placed in other services.

He said President Ford used the Sequoia only twice a year in the last two years, although Cabinet members and White House staff also used it occasionally.

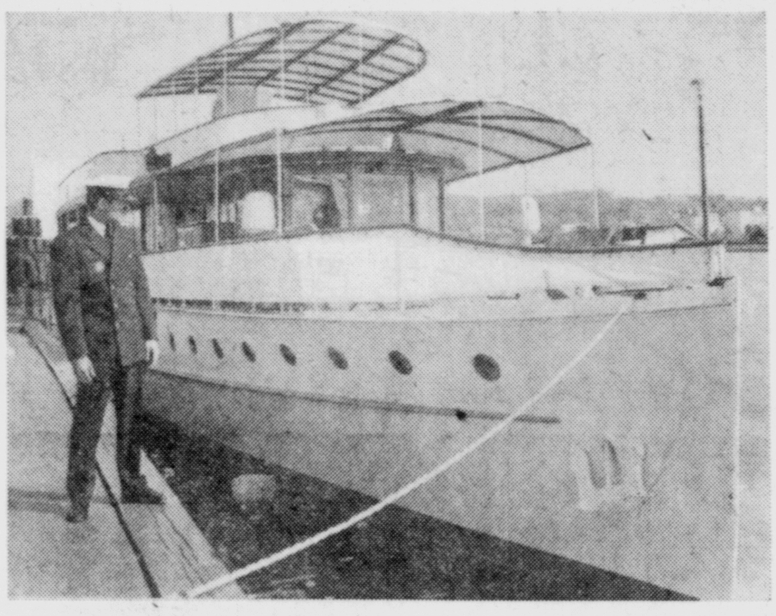
Carter, a graduate of Annapolis and a former Navy commander, has never seen the yacht, but "the President feels it is unjustified and unncessary," Granum said.

He said Carter enjoys yachting, but "there are other vessels he can go on."

The yacht was used by Franklin D. Roosevelt from 1933-36 and then turned over to the Navy. Lyndon B. Johnson reclaimed the boat for presidential use in 1968.

Richard Nixon used the Sequoia the most for private outings, and especially while the Watergate scandal was unraveling.

The Sequoia was built in 1924 at a Camden, N.J. shipyard and launched in 1925.



THE PRESIDENTIAL yacht 'Sequoia" is up for sale. President Carter ordered the sale of the Sequoia because it costs the government $800,000 a year to maintain and is "unjustified and unnecessary" the White Houe announced Friday. Arrangements for the sale will be handled by Defense Sec. Harold Brown.

Fremd reaches final four!

by JEFF NORDLUND

NORMAL, Ill. — A desperation layup by Hinsdale South's Karen Kvackay was ruled to have left her hand after time expired, giving Fremd an astonishing 48-47 victory in the quarterfinals of the state girls basketball tournament here Friday afternoon.

The play was a fitting climax for a wild game, but the final decision of officials Sue Gasperec of Oak Lawn and Carol Jankowski of Chicago so upset Hinsdale coach Lynne Slouber, all she could say to reporters later was, "We won."

The controversial call may become the key to the tournament, overshadowing a stunning comeback by Fremd, which trailed by 14 points early in the third quarter.

PEGGY HAMMIL'S jump shot with 22 seconds to play gave Femd its 48-47 lead, advancing the Vikings (21-1) to a semifinal match with undefeated Sterling (19-0) at 12:15 today.

Sterling was a 43-38 overtime winner over Fenger in a dramatic opener to the state finals, handing the Chicago Public League entry its first loss.

A second half full-court press gave Hinsdale South (20-2) fits as faster Fremd melted a 26-14 intermission deficit to its biggest lead of the game, 44-39, with 2:17 to play. But two baskets by Hinsdale's Kvackay and another by Cheryl Gallas, countered only by two free throws by Fremd's Connie Bruns, left the Vikings nursing a 46-45 lead with 1:05 remaining.

GALLAS PUT Hinsdale ahead again with a two-pointer, but following a steal by Bruns and a missed 20-footer by teammate Colleen Cannon, Hamill took the rebound away from a Hinsdale player and put the ball back up for the winning points.

Fremd's Donelda Danz was on the bench during the frenzied final minute, having fouled out with 2:50 left in the game. But before leaving, she scored a team-high 17 points, 11 of which came during the Vikings' second-half rally.

"Donelda was the key," Fremd coach Carol Plodzien said later. "In the first half we were too nervous and in too much of a hurry. That's the fourth or fifth time we've had to come back recently.

"I DON'T know if it's nerves or what," she added. "But we've got to think about it."

Bulls win, Kings stumble in race for playoff spot

by CHARLIE DICKINSON

Ed Badger once said he had one of the 22 best jobs in the world.

The position of head coach in the National Basketball Assn. is often a frustrating occupation but Badger would seem to be right on target in his observations after his Chicago Bulls stunned Midwest Division-leading Denver, 107-97 in the Stadium Friday night.

Combined with a 111-105 overtime Kansas City loss to Philadelphia, the Bulls moved into a tie for the remaining Western Conference playoff berth.

THE BULLS won this game with a little old-fashioned Chicago defense — shutting off Nugget leaper David Thompson with 22 points after the North Carolina State star collected 17 in the first half.

That marvel of restraint was accomplished primarily by reserve guard John Mengelt, who said, "I just tried to overplay David way to his right. He's a little less explosive going to his left."

Badger said, "I thought the key to this was our coming down and shutting him off. I love the guy, he helped me win the World Games in Moscow, but we had to stop him to survive."

For three quarters, the Bulls seemed to be staying close to the racehorse Nuggets out of sheer desperation. The game was tight through the first 36 minutes with 25 ties and 21 lead changes.

WHILE THE BULL regulars were putting in close to 20 minutes on the floor in the first half, Denver was running subs like Paul Silas, Mack Calvin and Willie Wise into the game to give their regulars a breather.

Yet the Bulls could forge only a 58-54 lead at the half and the crowd of 20,231 seemed to be waiting for the roof to fall in.

"This is a tough team for us to beat," Badger said. "They have so many fine players, but no matter who was out there, they gave us problems."

It was three players off the Bulls' bench that changed the complexion of the game.

THE OOST OBVIOUS contribution was the outside sniping of 6-5 forward Jack Marin, who hit 4-of-5 shots in the first half and closed with 14 points.

"I know I have to shoot when I'm in," Marin said. "That's my main purpose for being in the lineup."

Marin rubbed free off a pick inside and floated to the corner where he pumped in a 15-footer, igniting a six-point Bulls streak, that pushed their lead to 99-88.

Marin also canned a pair of 18-footers in the fourth quarter and suckered Denver forward Bobby Jones into his sixth personal foul.

"I think Bobby is one of the best forwards for moving without the ball in the league," Badger said. "It helped us a lot having him out of there."

CLIFF PONDEXTER, who could write a book about the mercurial affections of Bull fans, won hearts and flowers with his reserve performances Friday.

Pondexter muscled inside for six points in the deciding fourth quarter and got a standing ovation from the third-largest Stadium crowd ever, when he was relieved by Mickey Johnson.

The game was knotted at 85 going into the final quarter, but the Bulls outscored Denver 22-12 to up their record to 40-37.

"This is the first time I've won 40," first-year coach Badger quipped.

THE BULLS starting forwards, especially Scott May, had a mixed night. May was 0-for-4 from the floor in the first half and scored just seven points.

Johnson set a team record for most offensive rebounds in one quarter with seven in the opening period, but scored just 14 points after getting a dozen in the first half.

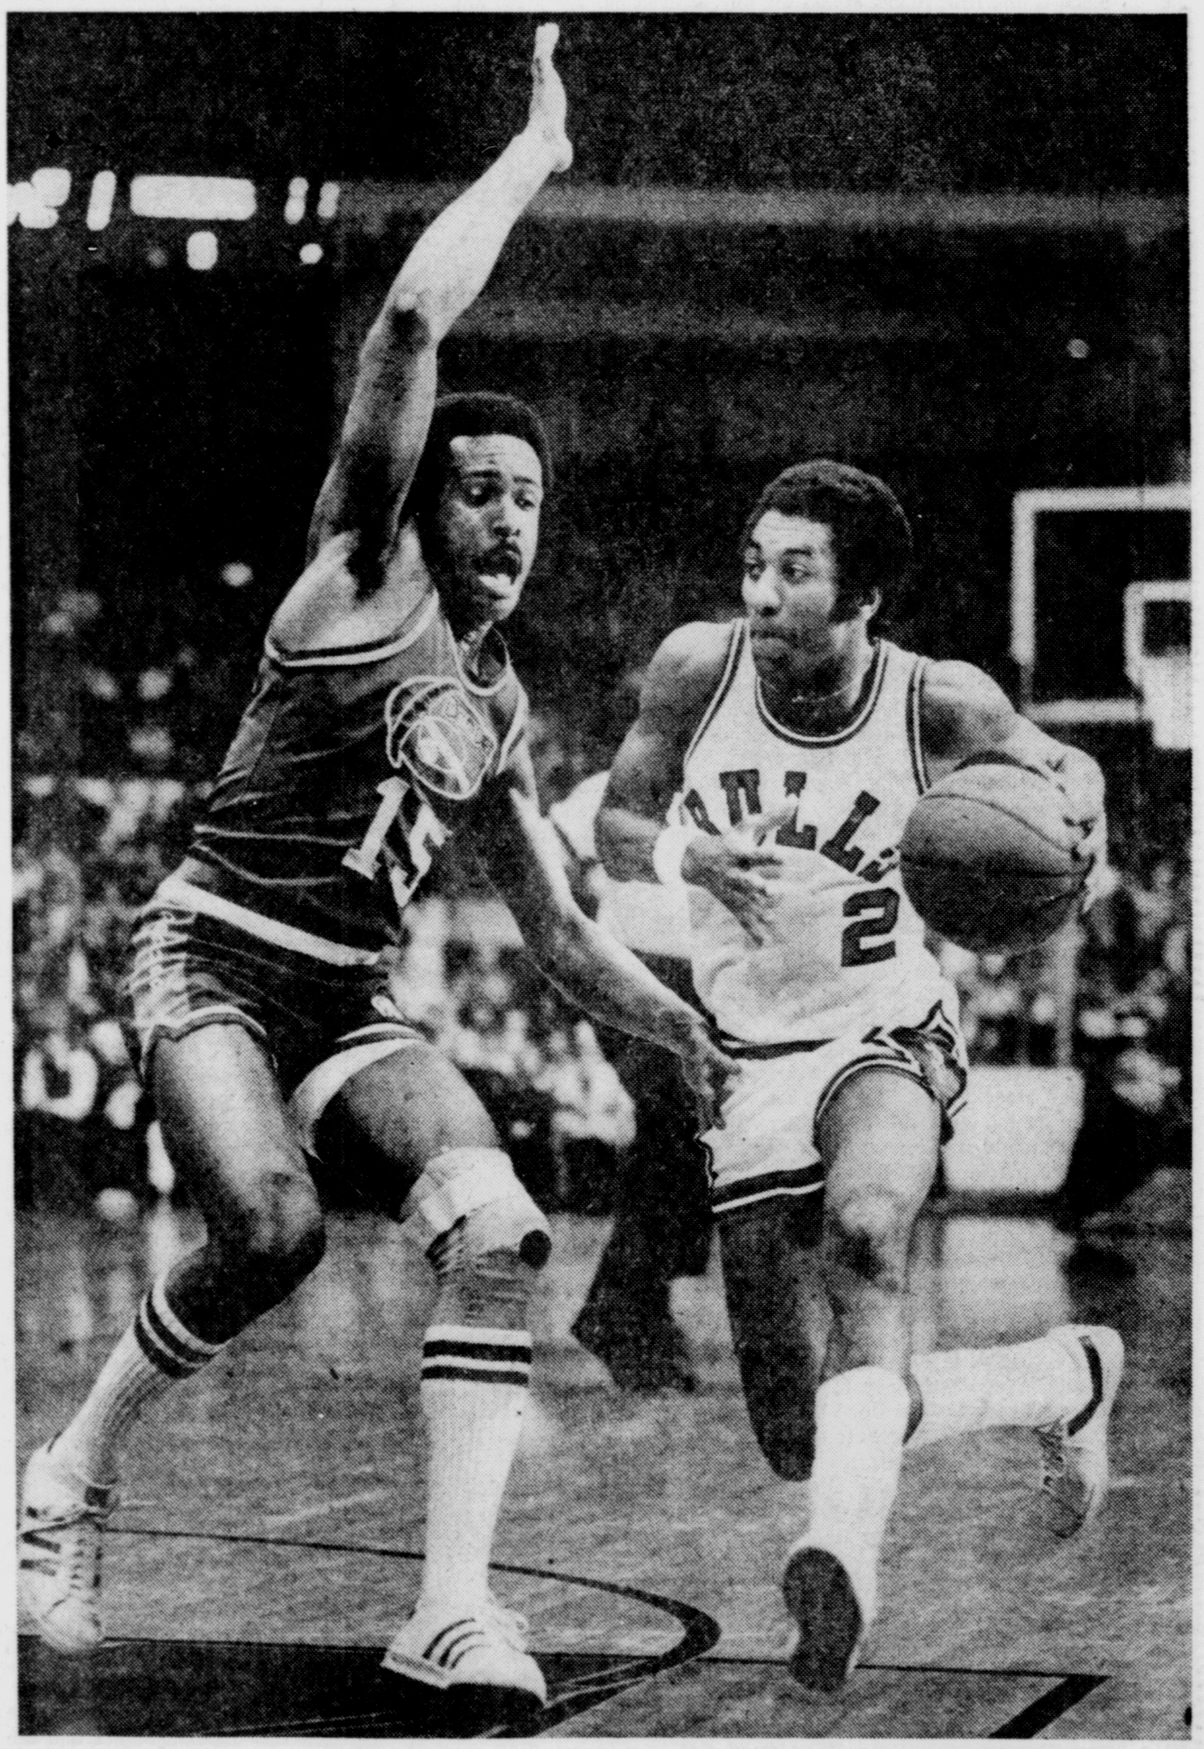
Wilbur Holland and Artis Gilmore led the Bulls with 20 and 21 points, respectively. Gilmore also picked off 17 rebounds and blocked six shots.

The game was notable for the level of violence that officials Ed Rush and Bill Saar condoned (58 total personal fouls and 72 total free throws).

WHEN IT WAS over, the bruises and bumps had been forgotten and everybody headed over to Halsted St. to Norm Van Lier's birthday party, the rigors of the evening forgotten.

In the flush of their first victory over Denver ever, Ed Badger's assessment of his employment situation is probably correct.

Elsewhere in the NHL Friday night, Earl Monroe scored 28 points to help the New York Knicks keep their playoff hopes alive with a 116-109 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks. Reserve guard Mike Newlin scored 15 fourth-quarter points to lead Houston to a 91-85 triumph over Washington and Dave Robisch scored 24 points to lead Indiana to an 89-88 win over the New York Nets.



STORMING DOWN the floor is Stormin' Norm Van Lier of the Bulls with Denver's Jim Price trying to adjust on defense Friday night in the Stadium. Chicago pulled away in the final period for an impressive 107-97 victory.

Area product to make Cuba trip

A former Prospect basketball player will be among the college players who will represent the United States in a basketball series in Cuba next week.

Will Freeman, a 1973 graduate of Prospect, and a senior starter on the University of South Dakota basketball team this season, will be part of the team which leaves for Cuba on Monday and wil play games against a Cuban star team on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

The team is made up of players from South Dakota State and University of South Dakota players who will be going as a good will gesture. "We were going to go last year, but the trip got canceled at the last minute," Freeman said. 'But at least we beat the Yankees there," he said, referring to a proposed plan that would have the New York Yankees play baseball against a Cuban team.

Freeman became a starter for his NCAA Division II team late in the season, taking ove at forward for the 11-13 squad's last 10 games. The 6-5 Freeman averaged eight points and 10 rebounds a game.

Let's make a deal; freedom for Namath

NEW YORK — Quarterback Joe Namath, the one-time "Broadway Joe" who was largely responsible for bringing credibility to the American Football League, was placed on waivers by the New York Jets Friday so that he could negotiate his own contract with the Los Angeles Rams.

Al Ward, general manager of the Jets, said waivers had been asked because the Jets had been unsuccessful in their efforts to trade him.

"We have taken this action to permit Joe the complete freedom to negotiate after the New York Jets' unsuccessful efforts to make a special trade for him," said Ward. "The owners of the Jets are deeply grateful for his outstanding contributions to the team. He has been a great asset and inspiration to the fans of New York. We wish him the best of everything in his future endeavors."

"Joe Namath is one of the finest quarterbacks to play the game and I've been around some 26 years and seen a lot of them, including playing with Otto Graham," said Jets' head coach Walt Michaels. "Joe has one of the best arms ever seen in the game. I wish him only the best."

Trio shares Greensboro Open lead

Greensboro, N.C. — Larry Nelson Friday hit a string of birdies for a six-under-par 66 that landed him in a tie with Danny Edwards and former U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin after the second round of the $235,000 Greater Greensboro Open.

Irwin joined Nelson with a 66, a course record over the 6,894-yard Forest Oaks Country Club course, while Edwards shot his second 68 of the tournament. The trio's 18-hole 136s were good for a two-stroke advantage over Rik Massengale with a 71-67-138.

Andy Bean, who held the first round lead with a 67, soared to a 4-over-par round to join defending champion Al Geiberger with 36-hole scores of 143. George Burns, who tied Edwards for second place in the first round, ended the day at even par for a 140 and sole possession of third place.

Johtnny Miller, who fired a 76 in the first round, withdrew after a 42 in nine holes Friday. He said a wrist injury that had plagued him for the past several weeks had flared up and he needed "to lay off of it for a while."

Burfeindt owns slim golf advantage

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — Betty Burfeindt, unbothered by blowing sand, shot a one-under-par 71 Friday to break out of a four-way tie and take a two-stroke lead after two rounds of the $240,000 Winners Circle golf tournament.

Burfeind's 36-hole total stands at 143, one under par in the LPGA event at the Mission Hills Country Club course. All alone in second place was Carol Mann, who also had a second-round 71.

Defending champion Judy Rankin, who was tied in the first round at par 72 with Burfeindt, Pat Bradley and Pam Higgins, skied to a 77 with a triple bogey six on the 14th hole for a 36-hole total of 149.

Holman is kingpin in bowling finals

MIAMI, Fla. — Early leader Marshall Holman came out on top by 307 pins in Friday night's match play session in the $100,000 Burger King Open professional bowling tournament. He will lead four other pro bowlers into Saturday's nationally televised finals.

Also qualifying for the four-match championship were Mark Roth of Staten Island, N.Y., Teata Semiz of River Edge, N.J., Louie Moore of Columbus, Ohio, and Steve Neff of Sarasota, Fla.

Earl Anthony, Tacoma, Wash., stirred some excitement at Don Carter's Kendall Lanes with a 300 in his final game, but he couldn't quite squeeze into the top five. He did jump from 10th place to sixth and will serve as an alternate.

Phoenix franchise dies in WHA

PHOENIX — The Phoenix Roadrunners of the World Hockey Association, faced with serious money problems because of poor attendance and unable to find new owners, Friday folded their franchise effective at the end of the current season.

The Roadrunners, struggling along in last place in the World Hockey Association's West Division, attempted to find a new ownership for the team but Roadrunners' Board Chairman, Karl Eller, was unable to find anyone interested in assuming the problems of the beleaguered franchise.

Both ends of spectrum for Cauthen

Cauthen, who picked up a handful of proclamations and a new car on "Steve Cauthen Day" brought Our Charmer from far back in the pack of eight horses to overtake Timely Bride at the wire in the first race.

But, in his second race, Cauthen's mount London By Day fell farther and farther behind in the seven-horse field and ended up last, far behind winner Key To My Heart.

Flames burn Hawks hopes 6-4

From Herald Wire Services

The Black Hawks need only a win to clinch a spot in the playoffs, but don't have a place to play if they do make it. However, the question may soon become academic.

The Hawks again were thwarted in their attempt to break into post season play, dropping a 6-4 decision to the Atlanta Flames in Atlanta Friday night.

So it's do or die Sunday night at the Stadium as the Hawks must win in the regular season finale against Cleveland to land a playoff berth.

THE HAWKS had to fight back from a 5-1 first period deficit Friday as the Flames, paced by Tom Lysiak's two goals, scored five times in the opening stanza.

Lysiak's goals came within seven seconds of each other, at 1:14 and 1:21. David Shand's unasissted goal at 6:30 made it 3-0 Flames before Dennis Hull put the Hawks on the scoreboard with a power play goal at 14:23. But the Flames kept coming, scoring two more goals in the period at 14:48 by Eric Vail and another by Willie Plett at 17:51.

The five first period scores by Atlanta came on just 10 shots on goal. The Flames took a total of 39 shots all night to 27 for the Black Hawks.

The Hawks scored the only goal of the second period as Bob Murray made it 5-2 at 7:30 of the second period.

THE FLAMES made it 6-2 with a power play goal by Guy Chouinard at 9:55. Chicago added two more with goals by Murray at 14:59 and Grant Mulvey at 17.51.

The Black Hawks still haven't solved the logistics problem that may force them to play all playoff games on the road if they do make it into post season play.

Scheduled rock concerts and a couple of Bulls games have the Stadium tied up for the opening games of the first round playoffs.

Biittner's bat leads Cubs; Reds' long ball beats Sox

The Cubs steamrolled the Cleveland Indians, 10-4, but the Sox bowed to the world champion Cincinnati Reds, 5-2 in exhibition baseball Friday.

Scoring in all but one inning, the Cubs knocked a pair of Cleveland hurlers for 17 hits, breaking a 2-2 third-inning tie on a double by Bobby Murcer, a single by Jerry Morales and an RBI double by George Mitterwald.

In the fourth, the Cubs scored the eventual winning runs on a walk to Ivan DeJesus, a balk, a triple by Joe Waillis and a single by Larry Bittner, who has 14 hits in his last 21 at-bats.

GUILLERMO HERNANDEZ, a rookie lefthander, worked five innings and got the victory for the Cubs, who received two hits from every starter in the lineup.

The mighty Reds, meanwhile, got homers by Ray Knight and Bill Plummer before the largest Sarasota White Sox crowd of the season, 4,253. Red hurler Jack Billingham opened with six scoreless innings before three singles and a walk in the seventh gave the Sox its only runs. Steve Stone was the victim of Cincinnati's first four runs.

Cards will rely on singles and speed

by BILL MADDEN

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — The St. Louis Cardinals, who in 1976 hit the fewest number of homers in the National League, will once again build their attack around singles and speed. This year, however,the Cardinals hope to improve their fifth place finish in the NL East with an added blend of pitching and defense.

Vern Rapp, the new manager who was tapped by the Cardinals for his first major league stint after a pennant-winning season at Denver of the Pacific Coast League, is a longtime believer in the pitching and defense theory.

"We'll rely heavily on the strength of our pitching and defense," said Rapp. "That's why we went out and tried to improve ourselves in those positions during the winter. I feel in John Denny, Pete Falcone, John D'Acquisto and Bob Forsch we've got as formidable a front four as you will see in the National League this year, and getting Ken Reitz back to play third base should help our defense considerably. It will allow us to move Hector Cruz back to the outfield, his natural position."

THERE'S NO question the Cardinals should be improved in those areas Rapp mentioned. But they still will likely show a woeful lack of power (just 63 homers last year) and the injuries which helped ruin the '76 season and terminated Red Schoendienst's long tenure as Cardinal skipper, may once again prove menacing.

Larry Dierker, the veteran righthander of no-hit fame obtained from the Houston Astros to beef up that pitching Rapp was talking about, broke his leg in spring training and, at 33, can't be expected to bounce back before midseason — if then.

And Bake McBride, the speedy, high average-hitting center fielder has still not completely recovered from the knee injury that ended his '76 season on Aug. 7.

With Lou Brock a year older (38) and the bullpen unsettled after Al Hrabosky, the most notable casualty of Rapp's "no beards or mustaches" spring training edict, the Cardinals will need all their bodies healthy if they're to be a factor in the NL East race with Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

STRENGTHS: Excellent hitting catcher in Ted Simmons (.291); an improved infield defense with Reitz at third, rookie Gary Templeton at shortstop and Mike Tyson back at second; better than average bench.

WEAKNESSES: Still unsettled pitching with D'Acquisto's comeback a question mark and second year man Eric Rasmussen unproven as an everyday starter; no proven reliever after Hrabosky; lack of long ball power.

NEW FACES: Backup first baseman Roger Freed, the minor league Player of the Year, reserve infielder Pat Scanlon, outfielder Tony Scott and pitcher Steve Dunning all came with Rapp from Denver in off-season deals; D'Acquisto and Mike Caldwell acquired from the San Francisco Giants are expected to bolster the pitching; Reitz, also from the Giants, will take over third base.

OUTLOOK: Depite a seemingly new attitude in the Cards' camp under the enthusiastic Rapp, a third place finish is probably the best St. Louis fans can expect this year.

Singles players hold early tennis spotlight

The 1977 tennis season may go down in history as the Year of The Singles Player and today's Arlington Prep, to be staged on the Arlington High School courts at 8:30 a.m., will provide the first testing ground for some of the best individals in the state.

Hinsdale Central, which romped over the Arlington Prep field last year and went on to win the state title for the fifth straight year, will showcase senior Ted Staren.

Staren has one final shot at winning the state singles championship that older brother Ed won in 1975. Ted fell to Matt Horwitch of Highland Park in the 1976 singles finals.

THE HOST Cardinals are justifiably proud of senior Paul Wei, fourth-place finisher in last year's state tournament and winner of the boys 16-and-under state championship in July.

New Trier East will bring junior Bob Frei to Arlington. Frei bumped off Wei in the third-place match of last year's state finals. The Indians, loaded with depth throughout their lineup, are counting heavily on Frei in their bid to unseat Hinsdale Central as state champions.

Oak Park sophomore Bruce Brescia is the fourth, and youngest, singles gun to open serious competition at the Arlington Prep. A veteran of state tournament play (he bowed to Frei in the 1976 quarterfinals), Brescia may have the state to himself in two years.

Palatine will be hosting their own invitational on the Harper College courts today at 8:30 a.m.

JOINING THE Pirates will be Fenton, Elmwood Park, Proviso East, Woodstock and LaSalle-Peru.

Palatine coach John Carlson is set on senior Mike Esenberg, senior Mike Stowe and senior Phil Groesbeck in the first three singles slots. Junior Mike Franzen and sophomore Todd Groesbeck are the Pirates' No. 1 doubles team.

Glenbard West, Maine East, Maine North and St. Charles will be at Prospect High School at 8:30 a.m. for the Prospect Invite.

Jim Gelhaar, the Prospect head coach, will be fielding a young team. Sophomove Dave Mallon will open at No. 1 singles for the Knights while senor Bob Blum and sophomore Tim Christiansen will man the next two spots.

NONE OF THE Prospect players have a lick of varsity experience.

Other area action will find Hersey at the Maine West Quad, Forest View at the Glenbrook North Invite and Buffalo Grove at the Lake Park Quad.

K of C to hold charity cage game

A charity benefit basketball game between the WJJD All-Stars and the Elk Grove Knights of Columbus will be held at Elk Grove High School, Thursday, April 21 at 8 p.m.

Tickets are $2.00 for adults and $1.00 for children and are on sale at Cheerio's Pizza, 3 Turner Ave. in Elk Grove.

Academy girls win championship

The 10-11 year old girls of the American Academy of Gymnastics, Inc. of Des Plaines garnered another first place team trophy (120.80) at the Eiche Turner Invitational held at Olympic Fields on March 26th. Deanna Schwartz led her teammates by capturing 3rd all-around (31.50) and placing second on bars (7.75) and third on beam (8.20). Sandy Sobotka took fifth all-around (30.75) and won top honors on vault (8.40). Wendy Specht tumbled to first place on floor (8.70), while Chris Bott's total also helped win the team trophy.

The boys team from the American Academy of Gymnastics, Inc. competed at the Eiche Turner Meet on March 27th and came home with the second place team trophy. Representing the Academy were Bill Rediehs, David Oak of Arlington Heights, and Dean Hellickson of Prospect Heights.

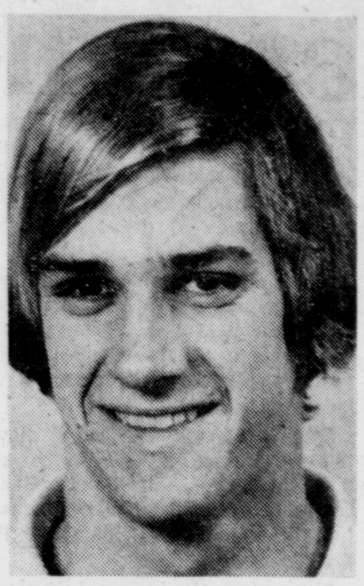
Prospect junior is captain

Cole heads all-area swim team

by BOB GALLAS
Swimming Editor

The junior from Prospect is the captain of this year's Herald All-Area Swim Team, after distinguishing himself as the area's best in a year that included win after win, including a state championship in the 100-yard butterfly.



Tom Cole

He achieved as a junior what most aren't able to do as seniors, but that didn't stop him from getting right back to work after the prep season and earning new honors.

ONE WEEK after the state meet, Cole took three firsts and a second in the Hinsdale Invitational, a prestigious meet that features the top talent from around the Midwest. His wins came in the 100- and 200-yard freestyle events, and the 200-yard butterfly. In the 100-freestyle, his time of 46.8 would have bettered the present high school record if swum during the regular prep season. In the 100-yard butterfly, his time was 0.5 slower than his state championship time of 51.650 and he took second, still a remarkable achievement since he had tapered out for the state meet.

His accomplishments make up a long list that shows his versatility. Cole made the Herald honor roll in six of eight individual swimming events, and was rated first in the area in four of those six events, the 100-yard freestyle (48.5), 200-yard freestyle (1:43.605) 100-yard butterfly (51.551) and 500-yard freestyle (4:47.0). He turned in the fourth best time in the 200-yard individual medley (2:08.0) and was second best area-wise in the 50-freestyle (22.1).

Those times in all but the 500 events were good enough to be rated among the 10 best in state. He also swam for Prospect's 200-yard medley relay team which won the Mid-Suburban League conference title in a record 1:43.758 and took second in the Arlington District while qualifying for the state meet.

His quick smile and easy going nature made him a popular figure with both his teammates and the opposition. His fierce competitive nature and strong dedication were a delight for his coach, Paul Reeff.

"TOM IS AS good a swimmer as any coach could ever hope for, both mentally and physically," said Reeff. "He thrives on competition and is at his best when the pressure is heaviest."

In addition to his state title in the butterfly, Cole also placed fourth in the 200-yard freestyle with a time of 1:43.605 and was the only area product to finish in the top six in two state events this year.

Swimming is a year round activity for Cole, who practices up to seven days a week, 11 months of the year. This summer, he'll be swimming in a number of Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) meets in the area.

Presenting the best of the rest

TOM STAHNKE

This Rolling Meadows senior posted the best area time all year in the 50-yard freestyle (22.082) and finished 10th in the state meet, after picking up the Arlington District title in the event. Stahnke also took ninth in the butterfly at the state meet, with a time of 53.702. A versatile swimmer, Stahnke also cracked the Herald's area honor roll in 200-yard individual medley (2:06.502) and 200-yard freestyle (1:50.7). In the Mid-Suburban League meet, the all-conference swimmer took first in the butterfly with a meet record time of 53.522 and second in the 200-IM with a time of 2:06.502.

SCOTT McCRATIC

Only a junior, this Arlington diver took second in both the MSL and Arlington District meets and finished seventh in the state meet. He was also second on the Herald honor roll with a best season score of 450.15 points in an 11-dive meet.

ALAN CYMBAL

Al Cymbal was the guy Scott McCratic was looking up at all year long. The Buffalo Grove senior took first in the MSL conference meet and first in the Arlington District, then moved up to take sixth in the state meet with an outstanding performance in the final round of diving. Cy Cymbal turned in the best 11-dive score on the Herald honor roll this season, 452.34.

TOM REDIG

Rtdig, only a sophomore but in his second year as a varsity swimmer for Forest View, is the youngest member of the Herald's All-Area Swim Team. But his accomplishments are that of the seasoned veteran. He posted the best area time of the year in the 200-IM (2:05.127) and was second best in the 500-yard freestyle (4:53.570). He took the MSL 200-IM championship in 2:06.249 and won the league 500 crown in 5:01.506, qualifying for the state meet in both events. He also won the district titles in those two events with times of 2:05.127, a new district record, in the 200-IM and 4:56.791 in the 500.

MIKE ROESSLER

One of the best breaststrokers the area has ever seen, Mike, not to be confused with brother Steve who's also a top Arlington breaststroker, posted the best area time of the year in his specialty and took ninth in the state meet with a time of 1:02.219. He set an MSL record in winning the event in the league meet with a time of 1:03.118 and took the district title in 1:03.852.

CHRIS STEWART

This St. Viator junior qualified for the state meet in the 200-yard freestle with his second place finish in the Arlington District (1:49.127) and also qualified for the 100-yard freestyle in the state meet with a district championship in that event in a record time of 49.013. Stewart was also a member of Viator's 400-yard free relay squad which took 12th in the state meet and won the district title with a best time all year of 3:19.473 which was best in the Herald area.

JON NEWCOMER

Another St. Viator swimmer, Newcomer had his finest moments swimming on both Viator relay teams, including the Lions 12th-in-state 400-yard freestyle relay and also the 200-yard medley relay which won the Arlington District title, qualified for the state meet with a time of 1:44.121 and posted the best time of the area with a 1:43.350 clocking. A senior, Newcomer came on late in the season soon after shoulder surgery and just missed qualifying for the state meet in the butterfly. He'd turned in a time of 1:49.9 as a junior in the 200-yard freestyle, but didn't swim the event this year because he was needed in other events. He turned in a 49.5 clocking on his 100-yard leg of the 400-yard free relay in the state meet.

MARK MARKWELL

Here's yet another St. Viator swimmer who was part of the Lions squad that won conference and district titles this season. Markwell was the Arlington District backstroke champ with a time of 58.021, qualifying for the state meet in that event. He was also part of the Viator medley relay team which won the district title and went to the state meet. He's another junior who'll be coming back to help the Lions next winter.

MATT KENNEY

Kenney is yet another St. Viator junior to make the All-Area squad by virtue of his performance in the 50-yard freestyle, where he posted the third best time in the area this season, 22.840, and took second in the district in 23.096, which qualified him for the state meet. Kenney also swam on the state meet. Kennty also swam on the Lions 12th-in-state free relay team, and turned in a 49.6 clocking on his 100-yard leg of the event.

SPENCER GILCHRIST

For the second straight year, Gilchrist found himself in the consolation heat of the state 100-yard backstroke competition, taking eighth with a time of 57.250. Gilchrist also won the MSL title in the backstroke in 58.895 and took second in the Arlington district in that event with a time of 58.231. He also swam a leg of Prospect's 200-yard medley relay which took first in the MSL conference meet with a record time of 1:43.758 and second in the Arlington District with a time of 1:44.859.

GARY DRAKE

Drake came on with his best swims of the year late in the season to help his Elk Grove team. A senior, he posted the third best time area wise in the 200-freestyle (1:48.755) and third best in the 500-freestyle (4:17.75). In the Arlington District he took second in the 500 (4:58.397) and third in the 200-freestyle (1:50.225), qualifying for the state meet in both events. He also swam on Elk Grove's free relay team which took second in the districts (3:23.991) and qualified for the state meet. The Elk Grove free relay won the MSL conference title in a record 3:25.3.

RANDY ROEL

A junior at Maine West, Roel turned in the second best area time of the year in the Backstroke (57.328) and won the Central Suburban League backstroke crown (58.370) and took 11th in the state meet in 57.455 after going 57.328 in the prelims. Roel also turned in fourth best area time in the 50-freestyle (22.940), taking second in the CSL league meet in 23.004 which qualified him in the state meet in that event too.

JIM ROWLAND

Rowland teamed up with Tom Stahnke to form the dynamic duo of Rolling Meadows swimming. A junior, Rowland was a versatile member of the Mustang team, turning in the fourth best area time in the 200-freestyle (1:50.144), third best in the butterfly (56.472), second best in the 100-freestyle (49.4) and fourth best in the backstroke (58.4). He won the 100-freestyle MSL title in 49.658 and was second in conference in the backstroke (59.178). He also took second in the 100-freestyle in the Arlington District (50.383) and third in the backstroke (59.012). He qualified for the state meet in both events.

MARK RUSCHE

One of two Buffalo Grove swimmers to make the All-Area team, Rusche transferred to the Bison squad from St. Viator. Rusche set a school record early in the year, going 1:04.1 two different times in the breaststroke, but couldn't get another time drop all year. He took second in the MSL meet (1:04.893) and third in the Arlington District (1:05.314).

MIKE YASKEY

The other half of Buffalo Grove's swimming twosome on the All-Area team, Yaskey fought off shoulder problems all year and turned in the fifth best backstroke time in the area (58.933). Was sixth in the conference meet in the backstroke (1:01.664) but dropped to 59.255 the following week to take fourth at the Arlington District and qualify for state. Yaskey, a senior, also turned in the third best area time in the butterfly (54.973), taking second in the conference meet (56.564) and third in districts (54.973) which qualified for state.

TIM BIRD

This junior who transferred to Elk Grove from St. Viator, is a superb 100 and 200-yard freestyler, but helped his team most by swimming on the Grenadier relay teams. He turned in the fourth best area time of the year in the butterfly (55.284). The Elk Grove medley relay team took third in the MSL meet (1:45.952). The Grenadier free relay team took first in the MSL meet in a record 3:25.3 and second in the district meet (3:23.991), qualifying for the state meet. Bird qualified for the state meet in both the butterfly and 200-yard IM.

Favored Cards breeze through badminton play

by BOB GALLAS

Heavily favored Arlington virtually wrapped up the Mid-Suburban League girls badminton crown Friday in preliminary competition of the conference meet.

There were few upsets as the field was pared down to four semi-finalists in each event. Semi-finals and final competition begin at Rolling Meadows today at 1 p.m.

Arlington put a semi-finalist into every level for today's competition.
every level for today's competition and earned enough points Friday to lock out any challenge today.

THE TOP SEED in first singles, Arlington's Jody Lyon, got the biggest scare of the day, but came back to win her way into today's competition. Lyon, after an opening bye, lost 5-11 to Schaumburg's Laurie Minarcik and trailed 6-1 in the second game before coming back to win 11-8, then again, 11-0

Also in first singles, Elk Grove's Cathy Coffman, who hasn't played that much singles all year, upset number four seed Mary Munson of Palatine. Coffman will meet Lyon in the semi-final round today. Barb Wright of Wheeling and Rolling Meadows' Libby Iturralde will meet in the other first singles semi-final match today.

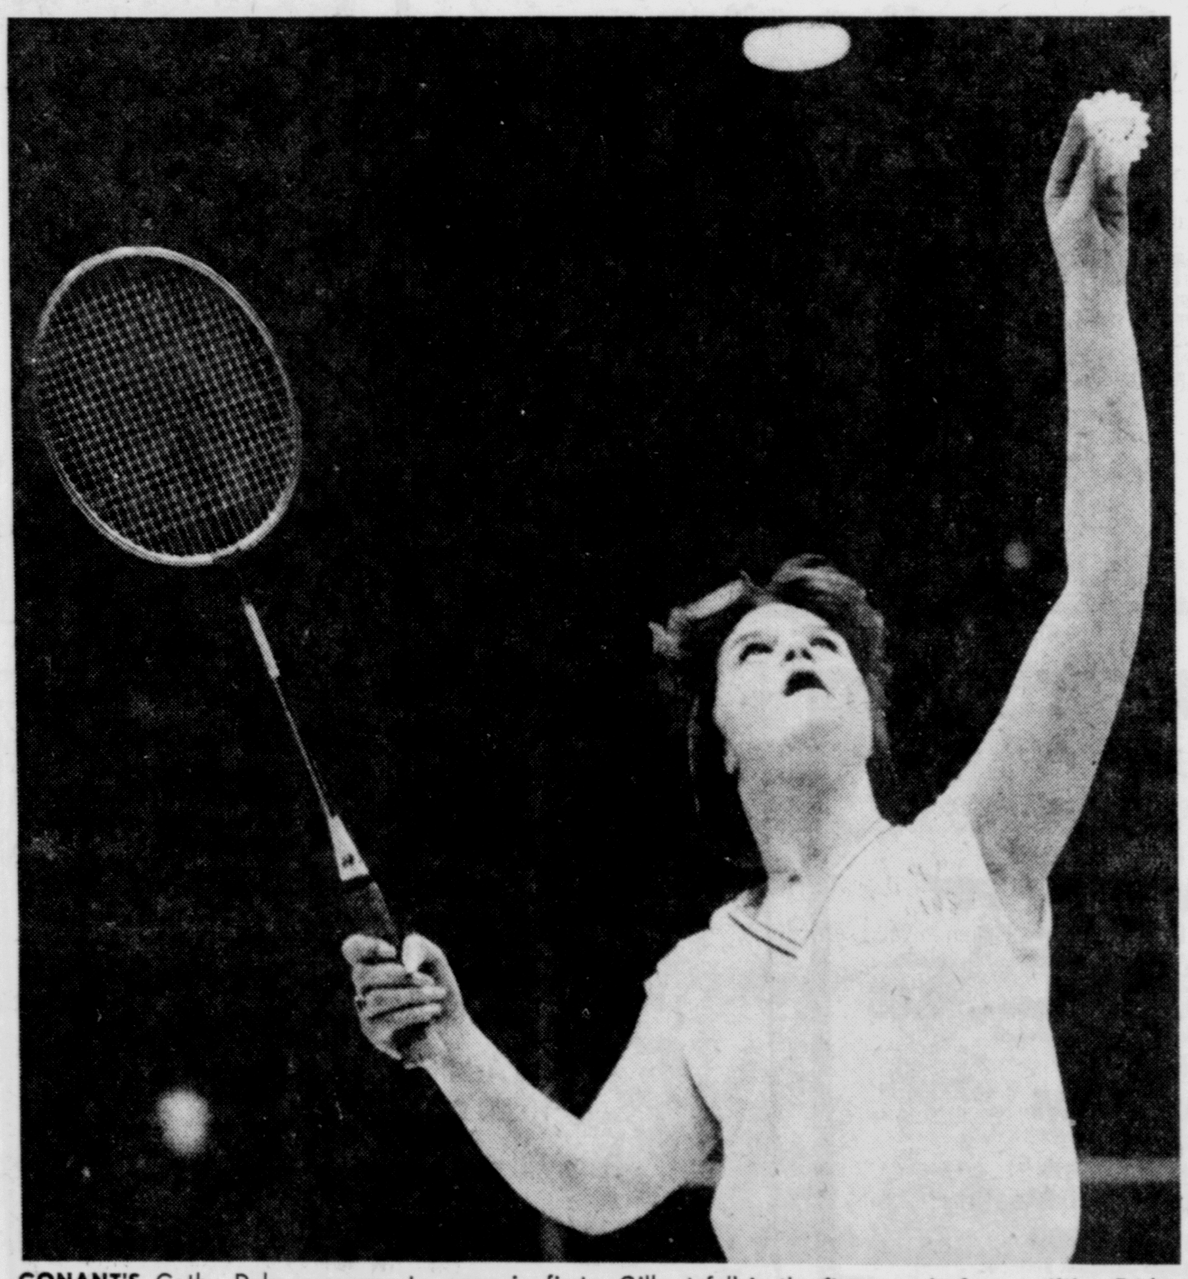
In second singles, top seed Leslie Grabitz of Arlington won the right to meet Palatine's Mary Vastine today. Rolling Meadows' Dawn Wiebe will meet Prospect's Lisa Young with the winners of those two matches meeting for the second singles title.

There were no upsets in third singles either as top seed Kathy Kozacky of Forest View won and will meet Prospect's Jo Obrycki in semi-final action today. The winner will meet the winner of the match between Arlington's Marianne Hey and Prospect's Peggy Munson.

IN DOUBLES play, the third-seeded team of Tracy Snow and Nadine Stocking of Prospect fell to Nancy Borre and Michelle Frank of Hersey. Another upset came in fourth doubles where the number two seed, Terri Wandersee and Linda Mueller of Rolling Meadows were felled.

Doubles competition today will be as follows: First doubles — Haberkorn/Zobel (Arlington) vs. Kurka/Mache (Prospect) and Svoboda/Wisniswski (Schaumburg) vs. Mason/Meyer (Arlington); Second doubles: Pugsley/Richey (Arlington) vs. Frank/Dietz (Hersey) and Patch/Fallahee (Palatine) vs. Ewald/Johnson (Rolling Meadows)

Third doubles — Golden/Ackerman (Arlington) vs. Anderson/O'Brien (Schaumburg) and Borre/Frank (Hersey) vs. Prelac/Petrucci (Rolling Meadows); Fourth doubles — Haberkorn/Weber (Arlington) vs. Kubinski/Oster (Schaumburg) and Guenther/Boe (Pal.) vs. Fatina/Karras (Prospect).



CONANT'S Cathy Duke prepares to serve in first doubles competition at the Mid-Suburban League conference meet Friday. The team of Duke and Kim Gilbert fell in the first round of competition Friday. Semi-finals and finals are at 1 p.m. today at Rolling Meadows.

NET RESULT. The annual smelt fishing season officially opened Friday night on Chicago Park District-supervised land on Lake Michigan. Smelters encountered the lingering reactions of a severe winter — cold water and few smelt.

Uneventful opening for smelt fishermen

Jim Cook

Outdoor editor

The early returns are in, but as expected, they're not very encouraging.

The 1977 smelt season officially opened at 7 o'clock Friday night along the Chicago Park District-supervised portion of Lake Michigan, but the results — or lack of them — indicate that the height of the run is still a ways away.

A hearty gathering of anglers enjoyed a warm but blustery wind that whipped the lake into a pier-pounding monster that created some havoc with nets. Still, the gusts didn't discourage fishermen's futile search of the 5-7 inch fish that annually make their spring spawning run up Lake Michigan's shoreline.

"THE WATER is still too cold," one angler who spent three hours dipnetting without success admitted. "If itS this bad now, the major run has to be a week to 10 days off. This is a waste of time."

The water temperature along the coast is still below 40 degrees in some areas. Spawning smelt ideally prefer water that is 50 degrees or even warmer.

While spring-like air temperatures certainly play a vital role in heating Lake Michigan water, warm April rains are generally responsible for creating optimum spawning conditions for smelt.

When the smelt are on the move, there's nothing quite like the excitement, suspense, bustle of activity, comaraderie and brilliance of the lantern brigade as they illuminate the breakwater.

The outfitting is cheap and simple. A smelt fisherman must possess a valid license (Illinois licenses expired Thursday and there are a short supply of 1977 licenses). Paul's Bait Shop on Rt. 12 (Rand Rd.), north of Rt. 53 has a few left.

Otherwise, an anchor, pole, trolley lines, pulleys, net, bucket and scissors are all that is required to catch an inexpensive and tasty meal.

Many sporting goods stores sell complete kits that contain the essential items for $20-$30. The bucket is handy for washing your hands, sitting on and eventually carrying home the smelt.

Scissors have emerged as the most useful tool in cleaning the fresh smelt. Between lifts of the net to squeeze the smelt through the mesh, cleaning only requires a quick snip to remove the head and a cut up the ventral side to extract the entrails. A quick rinse in water and the smelt is ready for a flour bath and hot frying pan oil.

Chicago Park District rules forbid the building of fires or shelters, alcoholic beverages, permanent equipor fishing during hours other than the specified 7 p.m. to 3 a.m. segment.

It is also unlawful tt sell the fish on park property or for more than one net to be attended by a single fisherman.

Lakes receive stocking

Trout fishing will open at Axehead and Belleau Lakes and at Sag Quarry (East) on April 9. These three areas will be closed to fishing from April 5-8. This closing of the lakes for four days will allow the trout to acclimate to their new home waters. This reduces their vulnerability to hook and line and extends the fishing success over a longer period of time and to a greater number of fishermen.

This first stocking of rainbow trout will consist of 6,000 fish divided among these three lakes. There will be two more stockings of trout in late April and May. This 'put-and-take' trout stocking program is meant for and enjoyed by thousands of family groups each year.

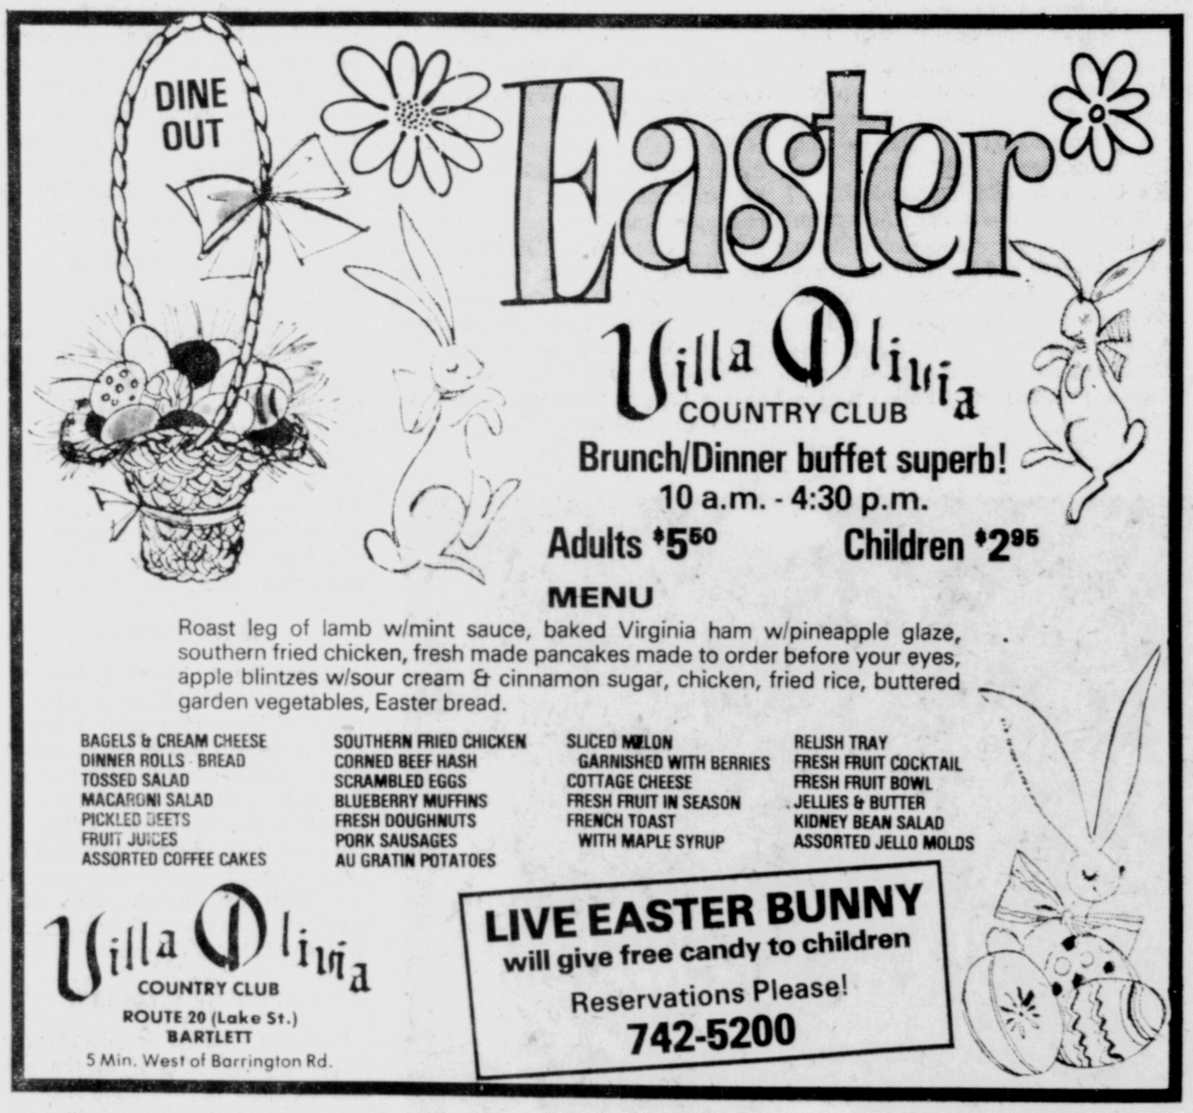
Axehead Lake, Belleau Lake and Sag Quarry (East) are the only lakes in the district suitable for trout stocking. They have sufficient deep cold water that is high in oxygen for maintaining a year-round trout population.

These waters have a limited natural fish population due to the lack of nutrients that produce fish foods. Consequently, these trout greatly supplement the natural fish population, and provide an excellent early spring fishery.

The first stocking is obtained through the Illinois Dept. of Conservation-Division of Fisheries. The fish are hatched and raised by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. The annual April and May trout stockings are purchased by the Forest Preserve District from a private hatchery in Wisconsin.

All fishermen who are required to have a State of Illinois fishing license must have the 1977 trout and salmon stamp. No special license or permit is required by the Forest Preserve District. The daily limit of trout is five per person.

Belleau lake is located just west of the Tri-State Tollway on Busse Hwy.; Axehead Lake is on Touhy Ave. just east of the Tri-State Tollway; and Sag Quarry (East) is on Old Archer Ave. off of Hwy. 83 approximately five miles south of the Stevenson Expressway.



Sterling, Washington, Centralia girls join Fremd

NORMAL, Ill. — The first girls state basketball tournament will be history by about 10 o'clock tonight, but right now four very capable teams still have high hopes.

Fremd, Sterling, Washington and Centralia, schools that have combined for a sparkling 70-5 record this winter, will assemble here this afternoon for the semifinals of the Illinois tourney.

Fremd, the Mid-Suburban League's finest with a 21-1 mark and a thrilling winner Friday over Hinsdale South, squares off with unbeaten Sterling (19-0) at 12:15. Washington (17-3) and Centralia (17-1) meet in the 1:45 battle.

The third place game will begin at 7:00 tonight with the first girls state championship determined at 8:30.

All games will be televised on WGN-TV (Channel 9).

CENTRALIA'S Orphan Annies, getting double figure scoring from three starters, upset highly touted Joliet West 56-47 in the closing game on the day's schedule.

It was the 17th win in 18 games for Centralia.

Joliet West, which had won more games this season than any other girls team, 26, managed to take the lead only three times in the contest, once by four points. But with 58 seconds remaining in the first quarter Centralia's Christal Royal netted a free throw for a 13-12 lead to stay in front for the rest of the game.

Centralia had a 28-20 lead at the half and 38-32 after three quarters.

Robin Carpenter dropped 15 points to lead Centralia. Terry Davis netted 13 and Torey Crowell 11 for Centralia.

West was hampered in the second half, losing three players on fouls including leading scorer Cathy Boswell. She was the only Joliet player averaging in double figures for the season and had 16 points Friday night before her fifth foul witih 2:15 remaining in the third period.

The only other double figure scorer for Joliet was Karen Hartman who had 12, all in the second half.

GLENDA SIMMERING scored 12 of her game high 22 points in the third period to spark a 16-6 surge by her Washington team which set up an easy 55-38 triumph over Mattoon.

Washington, winning its 17th game against three defeats and its 12th straight, never trailed in the contest. Mattoon, with a seven game winning streak broken by its fourth loss in 16 games, never led and gained ties only twice, both times in the first few minutes of the game.

Washington, with Simmering throwing in 10 points, had a 24-18 lead at the half, scoring six of the final eight points of the second period. With Simmering leading the way with three baskets, the Panthers scored eight of the first 10 points of the third period.

Washington has a 40-24 lead with eight minutes to play and Mattoon never came closer than 12 points thereafter.

Nancy Roth tallied 17 for Washington and Linda Nuxoll netted 15 to lead Mattoon.

KAREN McKINZIE scored 20 points to lead Sterling to a 43-38 overtime victory over Chicago Fenger in a battle of unbeatens.

Fenger, losing a girls basketball game for the first time after a 45-game winning streak, outscored Sterling 16-9 in the fourth period to send the game into overtime and went ahead for the fourth time in the contest at 38-36 when Veda Sargent got the first basket of the extra session.

But Jo Leseman hit from 15 feet to tie the score and Marche Harris, who scored eight points in the game, dropped a layup with 1:18 to play to put Sterling in front to stay. McKinzie hit on a free throw with 27 seconds remaining while Harris netted a breakaway as time ran out for the final margin.

It was the 19th win without a loss this season for Sterling.

Sterling trailed only twice in the first half, and had a 16-13 lead at intermission.

The Golden Warriors then earned a 27-20 lead at the end of third period but Fenger scored 12 of the next 14 points for a three-point lead and stayed in front until 1:57 remained in regulation time when Leseman dropped a field goal and McKinzie a free throw to give Sterling a two-point margin which evaporated on Denese Jones' five footer as time was running out.

STERLING'S Fran Smith, left, and Dawn Smith (42) put the squeeze on Fenger's Connie Gilbert in action Friday in the first game of the first girls state basketball tournament. Sterling won in overtime, 43-38, and will play Fremd today at 12:15 in Normal.

Fremd advances with dramatic win

After Fremd fell behind nearly from the start, Plodzien said she tried to put some spark into the squad late in the first period by starting to press.

"It never happened," she explained, noting the team did no better pressing than using the conservative 2-3 zone defense with which it started the game.

Hinsdale's size helped the Hornets to a 25-19 rebound edge in the first half, led by 6-foot-2 center Debbie Lueken who grabbed nine. Freshman hotshot Dawn Hallett scored 10 points for Hinsdale in the first two quarters.

TO NEUTRALIZE Hinsdale's size, Fremd's revitalized second-half press denied Lueken and Hallett the ball much of the time. The high-scoring Hinsdale pair tallied only 10 points together in the final half.

Lueken fouled out with 6:19 to play and her absence hampered Hinsdale under the basket. When Danz went out, though, the loss evened out.

Hinsdale switched to a press in the final minute and the game's emphasis switched to guard play.

In addition to the 17 points by Danz, Bruns had 10, Kathy Pfaender 9, Hamill 8, and Cannon 4.

Hallett led Hinsdale with 18 points, followed by Kvackay with 13, Gallas with 10 and Lueken with 6.

SINCE THE decision of the officials is final, Hinsdale can do nothing about the final-shot controversy.

Hinsdale South's boys basketball coach, Dave Arnold, sat with Klouber during the game, and he described the feelings of the team.

"It's just a judgment call," he said. "The girls thought the shot was good all the way."

Plodizen said that from her position on the floor she thought the ball had not left Kvackay's hand soon enough.

"It's my honest feeling that the release was not before the buzzer," Plodzien said.

At Beverly Lanes

Mary Barkulis earned the top award in the Lady Elks Women's League at Beverly Lanes by uncorking a hefty 211 game, 85 pins over her average. Teammate Dalfonso rolled high scratch series of 474. Handicap game highs included Perschbacher's 218 and 204, Holland's 210, Roy and Samuelson 209, Roy and Baker 207, Greener 204, Thelander 203 and Zelsmann 200. Alley Kats had 1601 series.

Eilering continues to hold first place in the Parkway Men's League at Beverly Lanes, just two ahead of Rose and Herr. Rose's streak of 45 straight points established a new record in the league. Highs for the week were Albert Juhnke's 541, Bob Quade's 205, Slottag's 213-563 and Joe Cannizo's 210.

At Fair Lanes

The Snow Flakes rolled a 2139 series and 763 game to highlight Thursday Eye Opener Women's League at Fair Lanes Bowl in Rolling Meadows. Esther Soukup hit 541-208, Jean Brogdon 518-190, Angie Pilcher 469-182, Alice Pellicane 176, Bron Stevens 167, Mary Jane Ibbotson 163, Shirley Twigg 160, Lori Johnson and Grace Lisching 158, Claire Bakowski 155 and Cile Zick 150. Ann Grimble converted the 5-10 split.

At Fair Lanes

The Rolling Stones remained in first place in the Plum Grove Ladies League at Rolling Meadows Fair Lanes with just four weeks remaining in the season.

Irene Swigers had the high game of 197 and the high scratch series of 475. Donna Clapp threw a 466.

Volleyball

Schaumburg

The Schaumburg Sunsetters (women) and Bushwackers (men) of the Schaumburg Park District captured three State of Illinois Volleyball titles during the last two weeks.

The Sunsetters won their third straight Illinois Parks and Recreation Assn. State "A" Title lasst weekend by beating Arlington Heights, 14-10, 11-9.

The Bushwackers won two State of Illinois titles last week.

They first traveled to the University of Illinois and were crowned the United States Volleyball Assn. Illinois State Champions of 1977. They defeated the University of Chicago, last year's champion for the title, 15-9, 15-7. Immediately following their title game they were pitted against the Indiana champions, the Indiana Masters, for the Open Title. The Bushwackers handled the Masters easily 15-7, 15-2. The following day the Bushwackers entered the Illinois Parks and Recreation Assn. Championships in Des Plaines. They also won this ten team tournament, 15-7, 13-15, 15-2 over Fritz's Prestzels. It was their tenth tournament victory this year.

EGG CANDLES

Make some of these bright little egg-shaped candles for your Easter table! With a pin, poke a hole in the small end of an egg. Break away shell around the hole to make a ¼ to ½ inch opening.

With an adult's help, put some old candles, (all the same color) in a tin can. Set in a pan of water. Heat on the stove until melted. Stand the egg, small end up, in a curtain ring. Carefully pour in melted wax. Stick a small birthday candle in the hole. Hold it in place by bending the wick over the edge of the hole.

When the wax is hard, break away the egg shell. Stand the candle in a curtain ring.

Bone china porcelain made by the English

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1977 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Kathy Fabian, 12, of St. Paul, Minn., for her question.

WHAT IS BONE CHINA?

Porcelain is called the aristocrat of ceramics because it is finely and delicately made. Where pottery is opaque, porcelain is translucent.

Porcelain comes from a Portuguese word meaning little pig. Portuguese traders at the end of the 17th century introduced Chinese porcelain to Europe, and because the pieces looked very much like shells, the name "porcellena" — a cowrie shell that was used for currency — seemed appropriate.

Fine porcelain today often is called china, because the product originally came from China.

Bone china is a variety of porcelain which was developed in England during the first half of the 18th century. The clay used in this fine type of porcelain is tempered with phosphate of lime or bone ash. This additional material increased the strength of the china during and after the firing.

Ancient records show that the art of porcelain making was invented in China at about 185 B.C. First items were produced for the imperial household.

During the Tang Dynasty (A.D. 618 to 906) the Chinese potters perfected the production of animal figurines with horses, lions and camels the favorite subjects. Vases of exceptional beauty also were made at this time.

Greatest advances were made during the Ming Dynasty (1368 to 1644). In the imperial factory in a town near Nanking, superb white porcelain was made. Also during this period cobalt blue and white, openwork porcelain and "grain of rice" pieces were introduced.

Between the 10th and 16th centuries, the Persians also produced a translucent porcelain that was very beautiful.

All the European countries eventually began making porcelain. First was Italy, where Medici porcelains were produced. Then in the 17th century France and England came up with some beautiful work.

A giant step forward came in 1709 in Saxony when Johann Bottger founded the famous Meissen factory and produced porcelain that became known as Dresden china.

As the years passed, other famous lines of china were produced. Denmark became a leading manufacturer. In 1744, under the patronage of the Russian czars, a factory was built in Leningrad.

After the special porcelain clay is cast into molds, it is allowed to dry before it is put into a kiln, or oven. It is baked at a comparatively low temperature and later dipped into glaze and fired again, this time at a very high temperature.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Sondra Giebl, 11, of Wakita, Okla., for her question:

WHAT IS A STY?

When the skin opening at the base of an eyelash becomes infected, the result is a sty. It is much like a pimple or blackhead that forms on other parts of the body.

Causing the infection, usually, is a blockage of the skin opening — or follicle, as it is also called — by a plug of the oily secretion from the sebaceous glands. This is a gland that connects to the follicle. When this happens, a staphylococcus germ sometimes produces an infection that brings a red, swollen, painful and sensitive area at the eye's lower lid.

Some doctors prescribe a warm compress to help draw out the infection. Sties usually clear up with little or no treatment after a few days.

Hand fails for lack of bid

South played dummy's four of diamonds at trick one. East played the eight to force South's ace. The defenders never got a diamond trick, but they did manage to collect two hearts and two clubs which was all they needed.

If East had risen with the jack of diamonds, South would have been able to finesse against West's queen, discard a club or heart on the ace and make his contract.

No one paid much attention to East's play. East knew he had played the right card, but North and South were so busy arguing about their bidding that no one stopped to compliment East.

There was really no cause to argue. North had a tough choice at his second bid. Three spades and even four spades were possible choices, but North had elected to bid two notrump. This left South with a choice between a pass and a raise to three notrump. South didn't have a singleton anywhere in his hand. He only had 12 high card points, but his hand was going to take six or seven tricks at either spades or notrump.

We would have bid three notrump because we are optimists and three notrump reels right in.

4 hopefuls seek 2 Dist. 21 seats

election 77

There are four candidates running for two three-year terms on the Wheeling Township Dist. 21 Board of Education in the April 9 election.

The candidates: Xenophon Daniel Kafcas, Linda Kurtzman, Herbert Stein and Stuart Weinstein.

Endorsements: Dist. 21 General Caucus, representing several of the schools and civic organizations — Kafcas and Stein. Teachers union — Kafcas and Weinstein.

The issues: Dist. 21 is in relatively good financial shape, with officials saying it may be possible to restore some items cut from the 1976-77 budget. Last spring the board eliminated 50 teaching positions and cut administrative and supply costs to avoid a projected $1 million deficit.

The district's financial future is not certain, however, and budget cuts or a tax increase could loom ahead if revenue does not come up to expenses.

If surplus revenue is available to the district, the board will have to set priorities on the use of those funds.

The proposed formation of a unit district in Elk Grove Township has implications for Dist. 21, one of seven elementary school districts in High School Dist. 214. The Dist. 21 board has asked the administration to provide information on what options would be available to Dist. 21 if Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 forms a unit district with part of Dist. 214.

The Dist. 21 teachers union will be negotiating a new contract for the coming school year and the board's relationship with the teachers will of concern. The board this year hired a professional negotiator to head its bargaining team.

State Schools Supt. Joseph Cronin's idea to voluntarily bus inner city black students to suburban schools is also of interest to Dist. 21.

Xenophon Kafcas

Address: 1103 S. Miller Ln., Buffalo Grove.
Age: 44
Occupation: Training specialist, United Air Lines.
Education: three years, University of Rochester and University of Colorado.
Married, two children.
Resident for two years.
Community involvement: Dist. 21 District Advisory Council; Irving Sctool Parent Advisory Council; Citizen's Committee to Study Finances of Dist. 21, 1976, member; Cub Scouts, Little League.

Xenophon Daniel Kafcas said he is running for the Dist. 21 board because "I owe a lot more to education and this district than money and taxes. I owe the time and commitment to make sure that the quality of education is maintained in this district."

Kafcas said "there must be a level of trust between citizens, the board of education, administration and teachers — a level of trust that enables the school district to function in an open, productive atmosphere."

"We need to create a climate in which people do a lot more listening and a lot less talking," Kafcas said. "If there is a meeting where there is a controversy then the board of education should structure it so there will be a full hearing of those views."

• Finances. "My inclination is to work toward a balanced budget. That does not include a budget that has a large surplus at the expense of programs," Kafcas said.

If the board had to make budget cuts, Kafcas said, he would divide the district's programs into three categories: "must, should and nice to have" programs.

The first to be cut should be the "nice to have" programs such as summer school enrichment courses, Kafcas said. He said special education is an "absolute must" and art, music and physical education are "very important to have."

Kfcas said he would support a tax increase referendum if it were necessary in the district.

• Educational priorities. Kafcas said if the district had enough money he "would like to see the kinds of enrichment programs that students who have special interests could volunteer in." He said he would like to see the district's art programs expanded.

• Unit district. "My impulse is to keep Dist. 21 as it presently is," Kafcas said. "What we need to do is to really gather information and arrange that information in terms of alternatives."

Kafcas said he is concerned about unit districts "because so much of the priorities are placed on high school." He said it is important to consider whether elementary education would suffer from a unit district formation.

• Teacher unions. Kafcas said he has no objection to working with a teachers' union.

• Teacher negotiations. It is a good idea for the board to have a professional negotiator so education can be kept "on a high level," Kafcas said.

Kafcas said he has no objection "to using whatever tools are available in order to bring about a settlement. If a federal mediator will clarify the issues and narrow differences, I'm in favor of it.

Stuart Weinstein, an assistant vice president for marketing for the National Assn. of Blue Shield, said, "I want to bring a business responsibility and a business influence to the board."

Weinstein said he would like to see more "individual responsibility" by board members. He said board members should contact community members on a one-to-one basis and "make a deliberate point of bringing those issues back.

"The quality of the board and the management of the administration has improved in the past few years," Weinstein said. "I would continue and encourage the open policy the board has right now."

• Finances. "You should attempt to have a balanced budget. However I see nothing wrong with deficit spending as long as it doesn't go uncontrolled and unchecked and if the need is documented," Weinstein said.

Weinstein said he would go ahead with borrowing through tax anticipation warrants if it meant without borrowing that needed programs must be cut. "Cutting back teachers is the last thing you would want to do," he said. "If it came down to deficit spending or cutbacks you have to examine the worth of each of the programs.

"There are always areas besides programs and personnel which could be cut," Weinstein said. He said he would look first at cutting administration and then at programs and personnel.

Weinstein said he would "adopt a wait and see attitude" before asking voters to approve a tax increase to avoid budget cuts.

• Educational priorities. If the district could expand programs Weinstein said his personal preference is to improve special education for "gifted and special kids."

• Unit district. "We have to be conscious of what impact the unit district will have on the educational level of the community as a whole," Weinstein said.

He said he "would encourage the

Stuart Weinstein

Dist. 21 board to now get involved in discussions both pro and con on what the financial impact would be." He said there are many more facts which must be brought forward.

• Teachers unions. "I'm not opposed to unions. The teachers have organized and handled themselves in a very professional manner," Weinstein said.

• Teacher negotiations. Weinstein said he does not see the board's decision to hire a professional negotiator "as an abrogation of responsibility. It can get a very professional attitude toward negotiations and stay away from emotionalism."

He said he would not oppose the entry of a federal mediator into contract talks because a third party can eliminate personalities and concentrate on issues.

A professor and associate dean of the College of Engineering at the University of Illinois at Chicago Circle, Herbert Stein said, "With my background, the school board is the best place for me to perform my civic duties."

Stein said the board of education should help make the major policy directions and contingency planning. "They should be more involved, better able to react and work with the superintendent to come up with solutions," he said.

• Finances. "We can take a slightly less conservative view to spending and yet not go to a deficit," Stein said. "I'm wary of deficit budgets. I think the district has to be financially sound."

Stein said he would support a referendum to increase taxes if it "would do anything to avoid degrading the educational system." He said he supported a tax hike last summer because "I did not want to see any deficit spending and I did not want to see any further cutbacks."

If budget cuts must be made, Stein said the persons who are running the program should decide what they could cut that the parents would accept "and still maintain the most viable program."

• Educationlal priorities. Stein said if the district could get more money he would want to enhance "special education on both ends of the spectrum," for gifted as well as slow learners.

• Unit district. If the formation of a unit school district in Elk Grove Township was "supported by everyone in a free and open election, how can you argue with a democratically ascertained decision?" Stein said.

Stein said the problem with the unit district proposal in Dist. 59 is "it has not been explicated to me what the advantages are of what they are trying to do. I would have to be convinced as to what real advantages there are in doing it."

• Teacher unions. "As it is now teachers are not paid enough in their relative worth to society," Stein said. "Without a union they would not get a decent shake."

Herbert Stein

Stein said Dist. 21 "must provide teachers salaries on a par with other districts. They may have to end up trading bodies for money but that's up to them." He said he would like to see special merit increases for very good teachers but "it is up to the union."

• Teacher negotiations. Stein said he is in favor of a professional negotiator for the board, which Dist. 21 hired for the first time this year. "I like the idea of having someone external come in, acting as a buffer," he said.

• Voluntary busing. Stein said he is against busing inner city black students to Dist. 21 because of the "long standing good arguments for neighborhood schools." He said he believes communications between parents and the schools, and children and their peers are lost when children attend schools out of their community.

Linda Kurtzman

Address: 463 Buckeye Dr., Wheeling.
Age: 31
Occupation: Homemaker.
Education: Chicago City College, University of Illinois dental assistant graduate.

"I am campaigning for an open board that will try to strive to meet the needs of the community as a whole," Linda Kurtzman said. "Right now we are not showing this total representation of the district as a whole."

A homemaker from Wheeling, Kurtzman said she would like to see Wheeling become more actively involved in Dist. 21 affairs. "It's a very large district and if communication lines are not open people are not aware of what is going on in other parts," she said.

Kurtzman said the district should get more information out about what individuals can do in the district. "Parents moving in are totally lost in the shuffle," she said.

• Finances. "I'm not pleased with deficit spending," Kurtzman said. "However, our primary concern is getting a good education to our children. We have to weigh deficit spending against cuts that would hinder our children's education."

Kurtzman said "we cannot cut our basic, essential programs. There would have to be more administration and supply cuts before I would consider cutting anything out of the curriculum."

"The teacher cuts last year were necessary. The way they were handled left something to be desired," Kurtzman said. "I would have liked better communication rather than an all-out confrontation and mass firing."

Kurtzman said she "would investigate all other avenues or sources of revenues before going to a tax referendum."

• Educational priorities. The top priority for surplus funds should be the expansion of the gifted program and the rehiring of the gifted coordinator, Kurtzman said.

Other priorities she listed are the restoration of coordinators in other areas, the in-service program for teachers and an elementary foreign language program.

Kurtzman said the district also "needs a school lunch program that offers lunches both nutritious and palatable" and possibly a breakfast program in some schools. "The district as a whole needs to investigate after school day care in other areas," she said.

Linda Kurtzman

• Unit district. Kurtzman said she would not support the formation of a unit district with Dist. 21 and part of High School Dist. 214. "I see Dist. 214 staying as it is now and I would involve Dist. 21," she said.

• Teacher unions. "It is necessary for teachers to have a union. They must have someone to speak out in their behalf. I believe in getting the best contract for our teachers," Kurtzman said.

"Dist. 21's pay scale on an average is certainly no worse than other pay scales in the area," she said.

• Teacher negotiations. "Negotiations are so sophisticated we need legal representation to get a contract that is workable and will please both sides," Kurtzman said.

Down home cooking at the White House

by PAMELA REEVES

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House chef predicts President Carter's food bill — $600 for 10 days in January — will go down now that Rosalynn has decreed more leftovers and less beef tenderloin for the first family.

Carter, who pays for any food served on the second floor family quarters of the White House, told a town meeting in Clinton, Mass., he was amazed to learn the cost of meals during his first 10 days in office.

"We've been really watching the food bill since then," he said.

Chef Henry Haller, who supervises preparation of all formal White House dinners as well as the Carter family meals, said in an interview the message to cut back has been sent to the kitchen by Mrs. Carter, and he is complying.

Haller said food bills are usually higher when a new administration comes in because "in the beginning I serve the best we can."

"When they came in, I didn't know they wanted to eat leftovers," he said. "So I served maybe roast beef twice a week, and tenderloin of beef. Then I was told to cut that down . . . we don't want to spend this kind of money."

Haller, hired away from New York's Ambassador Hotel in 1966 by Lady Bird Johnson, said Mrs. Carter recently found a leftover sweet and sour cabbage dish in the refrigerator and asked him to serve it for lunch.

"They want to use up everything possible," he said. While the Carters eat many of the same dishes other first families did, Haller said, they definitely like a southern touch in their personal meals.

"When a new administration comes in here, we do our homework," Haller said. "We want to show them we can please them."

He found, for example, that the Carters like sea trout breaded and fried crisp instead of cooked in a wine sauce or broiled.

With the trout, they might have spoon bread or hush puppies, Haller said, and on Sundays, "we have quail (braised on top of the stove in water instead of roasted) with grits, cornbread patties and collard greens."

Haller said the Carters are "very punctual" about meals, "which for a chef is very important."

The President breakfasts early on juice and coffee in his private quarters, but Rosalynn, daughter Amy and sometimes the two Carter sons and their wives sit down for breakfast at 8 a.m. Haller said they eat poached or scrambled eggs, sometimes bacon or sausage and sometimes just dry cereal. For lunch, the family likes homemade soups, especially vegetable, pea and navy bean, and sandwiches or dinner leftovers.

Dinner is at "7 o'clock sharp," and it is made simpler by the fact that the Carters habitually eat dessert only on Sundays.

Haller, who has a staff of seven, makes up a week's worth of family menus and sends it each Monday to Mrs. Carter. He said she is "easy to please."

When a dinner for foreign heads of state or important visitors is coming up, Haller prepares several menus for the First Lady to choose from.

So far, the menus have been American but with little southern influence — breast of capon in white grape sauce for the Mexican president; roast stuffed saddle of lamb for the Canadian prime minister; roast duckling in orange sauce for the governors; baked striped bass for the Israeli prime minister; and roast rib of beef with Yorkshire pudding for the British prime minister.

Those meals, served in the state dining room on the first floor of the White House, are paid for by the government. But if Carter invites a foreign head of state to an informal lunch in the family quarters, the president pays the tab.

Haller, a Swiss who wears spotless white shirts and pants and a traditional tall chef's hat at work, prepares formal meals in a gleaming stainless steel kitchen filled with gourmet equipment. He begins work on state dinners three days in advance but does most of the cooking the day of the dinner with three assistants.

The Carter family meals are put together on the second floor of the White House in what Haller described as a modern family-sized kitchen with a four-burner two-oven gas stove, dishwasher, refrigerator and freezer.

And though mice are an acknowledged presence in the White House, Haller says there are none in his kitchens.

"Someone told me they have heard them singing," he said, smiling. "But I don't see mice. I don't have mice here."

Cops step aside; Hash Bash is on

ANN AROBR, Mich. (UPI) — Campus security guards and police, overwhelmed and outnumbered by a festive throng of teen-agers, Friday lost a battle to thwart the sixth annual "Hash Bash" celebration of spring and pot at the University of Michigan.

About two dozen policemen and university guards spent the morning turning away youths, some as young as 11, from the "Diag," a park-like square surrounded by university buildings.

But the growing streams of celebrators, carrying brown paper bags, blankets and frisbees, at noon became more than the officers could handle. The police moved aside as almost 2,500 celebrators jammed the area, causing a monumental traffic jam.

"THEY CAN'T stop our Hash Bash," the revelers chanted.

"It just got too big for us to stop them," Sgt. Donald Johnson said.

The Hash Bash has been a traditional April Fool's Day feature at the campus and participation mushroomed after 1973 when new local and state laws reduced marijuana possession to a possible $5 fine. Last year it drew 5,000, many of them high school and elementary school students.

A half dozen arrests were reported, most of them for illegal possession of alcohol. Some youths were accused of resisting arrest.

POLICE WRESTLED with two youngsters before making arrests, but no other trouble was reported. Citations also were handed out for marijuana possession.

Earlier grumblings from teen-agers who had a day away from school ruined gave way to complaints from university students.

"I've seen the Hash Besh turn from cool to not cool." said John Zissiz, a junior and local resident. "If we (Um students) want to get high, we'll go back to our rooms."

Dave Breakey, another student who grew up near the campus, suggested the city "could make a fortune on taxes" if officials went along with the idea and sold marijuana.

"IT'S LIKE A headache," Police Chief Walter Kresny said. "You wish it would go away, but two aspirins won't help this one."

"University and city officials are united in their determination to dissuade individuals from detracting from the university's main concern — education — and the city's normal activity." UM spokesman Joel Berger said.

Area schools and parents were asked to discourage children from coming to the campus, and radio stations were urged to restrict publicity of the event. But that campaign was countered with flyers, T-shirts and other paraphrenalia hearlding the festivities.

Last April, the showers caught Chris Armbruster empty-handed.

This April, she's doing much better at Home.

There are lots of ways you can get soaked, by a sudden shower, or by a bad investment.

At Home Federal Savings you can avoid both. Deposit $250 or more in a passbook savings account, and we'll give you a free umbrella.

Your money will go to work for you in an insured-safe account, earning 5¼% interest—more than any bank can pay on similar accounts. It will compound predictably with daily interest. Also, deposits made by the tenth of the month earn interest from the first, if left in your account until the end of the calendar quarter.

And your umbrella will go to work for you whenever it rains, keeping you safe and dry from unpredictable spring skies. It's available in blue, red and tan for ladies and black for men.

So open an account at a convenient Home Federal branch office near you. And start saving for a rainy day.

Offer good at Buffalo Grove branch office.

A look at ten years of laughs for Carol

by Vernon Scott

The most venerable prime time television series on the air right now is "The Carol Burnett Show" which just wrapped up its 10th season.

No other current show has lasted so long. Its record is all the more impressive when one takes into account the mortality rate of variety-comedy or musical shows.

Such stars as Julie Andrews, Sonny and Cher, Mac Davis, Jim Nabors, Glen Campbell, Tony Orlando and others have come and gone during Carol's successful run.

Carol's enduring popularity with viewers cannot be overstated. But perhaps the real key to her success is a man named Joe Hamilton, the unpublicized executive producer of the show, who also happens to be Carol's husband.

Handsome enough to be a leading man, Hamilton has gray hairs, an athletic physique and a self-effacing manner which masks a disciplined mind and tough inner fiber.

He has devoted most of the past dozen weeks to assembling a 90 minute CBS special edition of highlights from the first decade of the show which airs Saturday at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 2.

Hamilton concluded a production meeting with his writers and stars — including Tim Conway, Harvey Korman and Vicki Lawrence — and said one of his toughest jobs was winnowing 90 minutes from the 251 hour-long shows.

"It meant taking about six minutes from each year's worth of shows," he said. "The first stage was five hours and 40 minutes long. Then I cut it to two hours. Cutting the last half hour was like amputating parts of a body.

"I was surprised how much the show changed from year to year, the format evolving gradually as some of the characters in various sketches were dropped and new ones added.

"It was interesting to see how much Carol has grown as a performer over the 10 years. She has much more self-confidence now.

"Next season, with Harvey leaving and Dick Van Dyke joining the cast, the show will provide a different tone altogether.

"No one can replace Harvey. And Dick won't try. He's a star in his own right. Dimensions will be added and subtracted. I'm interested in seeing how Dick and Tim Conway work together.

"Carol and Tim, who does some of our writing, both have fertile minds and contribute tremendously to the content of our shows. Dick is a creative man with good ideas too."

Producer Hamilton sees some advantages in the husband-wife television combination. But he thinks he and Carol would work just as efficiently if they weren't married.

"We don't bring much of the show home with us," he said. "We get enough of it here at work. Yet some of the best ideas have come up at home when we're just kidding around."

It is characteristic of Hamilton to spread credit for the show's success among his staff when in fact he is the man who makes the hard decisions.

Hamilton must hire and fire writers. It is he, along with business manager Bill Hayes, who negotiates with the network. But Hamilton remains in the background, never venturing on stage at rehearsals or during taping.

"The Carol Burnett Show" is unique in that inquiries about syndicating past years of the show come to Hamilton regularly. Sponsors, buyers, stations and syndicates are eager to rerun the oldies — a first for that type of program.

The Hamiltons have been married 14 years and are the parents of three lovely daughters, Carrie Louise, 13, Jody Ann, 10, and Erin Kate, 9.

Lesser men resent being the behind-the-scenes husband of superstars. Some compete for attention with their famous wives. Hamilton is a secure, relaxed man who purposely keeps a low profile.

"I was a producer when I hired Carol as a regulr on the old 'Garry Moore Show' in New York back in 1960," Hamilton said.

"Being famous isn't important to me. I gained enough self-confidence when I was a 29-year-old producer. Public acclaim is for performers. My ego doesn't interest me. I just want to produce a good product.

"Carol and I were both out of work when we started this show. I put a staff together and went to New York for conferences in April of 1967. There was a schedule board in a CBS office that listed our show with a question mark.

Carol Burnett has been portraying the familiar charwoman throughout the 10 years and the more than the 200 shows taped since the series premiered in 1967.

"The head of production told me the network didn't think the show would make it — even before we went on the air.

"After the second year I felt we might go five or six years. Now I believe it can run as long as the public wants to see Carol."

Randolph Mantooth

Q. I have been keeping an eye on your top ten shows, and noticed that "Emergency" never makes it. Does the show have low ratings? Also can you print a picture of Randolph Mantooth? Is he really an Indian?

A. Through the first 25 weeks of the season Emergency is ranked 83 tied with Sonny and Cher. The Nielsen National Index lists 131 programs so Emergency is probably not in trouble, but its competition in the 7:00 p.m. time slot (MTM and Blansky's Beauties) are both ahead of it in the ratings. Here's Randolph! And he's not an Indian.

Sam Bottoms

Q. Was it Sam Bottoms who played "Ben" in the movie "Savage" that also starred Andy Griffith. Sam was listed as a co-star and we assumed he was the youthful Ben. Where can we get his picture so we can tell. W.S.

A. Why don't we just print his picture then you can see for yourselves that Sam did play the role. And we think he did a fine job in a tough role.

Q. My girlfriends and I were wondering if there is anywhere we can buy Parker Stevensen posters like the ones they have of Farrah. I'm sure we're not the only ones looking for his poster. Please print his picture! S.M.

A. You almost have to be a superstar before you make the poster set. Parker's not there yet. But if the "Hardy Boys" show lasts he may be.

Editor's note . . .

One of the greatest art treasures of mankind is coming to Chicago April 15. So valuable no amount of insurance could cover its worth, so spectacular hundreds of thousands of people stood in line to see it in Washington D.C. and more than a million are expected in Chicago.

Tutankhamun, ruler of Egypt for a mere nine years and dead by the age of 18, was buried with awe-inspiring treasures of gold, jewels, alabaster and irovy. Fifty-five years ago British archaeologist Howard Carter unearthed the secreted tomb, dazzling the world with his discovery. In commemoration of the find and as a Bicentennial gift to the United States, the Egyptian government has sent fifty-five of the treasures to the United States for a two-year tour.

The Field Museum of Natural History of Chicago is the second stop for the show. Enormous crowds are expected and the museum has gone to elaborate measures to accommodate the multitudes.

Kurt Baer researched the fabled boy king of Egypt and reports on his treasures and the exhibit on page 8.

The "King Tut" mania that is being experienced by the United States during the tour has sparked a renewed interest in tourism to the land of the pharaohs as Travel Editor Katherine Rodeghier reports on page 3.

EGYPT

Awed by Tut's treasure, Americans have had a glimpse of what Egypt has to offer and they long to see more

by Katherine Rodeghier

Egypt's most influential ambassador is a 3,300-year-old king.

Today, centuries after his death, the Pharaoh Tutankhamun, King Tut for short, is still doing his bit to promote tourism to his homeland on the Nile.

Thousands of curious Americans are drawn to museums across the U.S. to see the traveling exhibit of Tut's treasures. As a result thousands of Americans having seen or heard of the exhibit have suddenly become interested in things Egyptian and are booking tours to the land of the Pharaohs.

The Egyptian Government Tourist Office reports that 46,851 Americans traveled to Egypt in 1974. Last year the figure rose to roughly 80,000 and indications are that even more American tourists will find their way to the blue waters of the Nile this year.

Travel to Egypt by Americans has nearly doubled in just two years said Mohamed Hussein Bazaraa, director of the tourist office, and one of the reasons for this increase is the King Tut exhibit. King Tut is "saving us millions of dollars in publicity," he said. Many among the thousands who have viewed the magnificent treasures have had a glimpse of what Egypt has to offer the visitor and they long to see more.

Another reason for the resurgence in tourism is the normalizing of relations between Egypt and her world neighbors. Travel to Egypt was at a low ebb in the late 1960s and early 1970s when hostilities between the United Arab Republic and Israel frightened many tourists away. Even after hostilities subsided would-be travelers remained wary and vacationed elsewhere, said Bazaraa. "The green light was not on as it should have been. It was yellow."

Now that there is relative peace in Egypt, tourists are flocking to the major archaeological and historical sites. But this flood of visitors has added to Egypt's problems of overpopulation. Hotel rooms are scarce and transportation within the country can be difficult to come by.

Of particular concern to the tourist is the hotel situation. Any tourist who enters the country without confirmed hotel reservations is almost certain to find himself without a place to spend the night. "It would be very hard to find a room" traveling as an individual, said Bazaraa, because almost all rooms are "already blocked or reserved" by tour groups. The best way to travel in Egypt is on a group tour arranged by a travel agent.

"Our house is not ready to receive thousands of tourists," said Bazaraa, citing the shortage of hotel space. More than 1 billion dollars has been committed to building new hotels in Egypt during the next 10 years. Today there are some 21,000 hotel beds in the country and plans call for the addition of 48,000 more.

Egypt's life blood today, as it was in Pharaonic times, is the Nile. Roughly 96 per cent of Egypt's 40 million people live on the river delta and the narrow strip of land on the banks of the river, an area which occupies only 4 per cent of Egypt's total land area. The capital city, Cairo, where the river begins to fan out into its delta, has about 9 million residents and is growing by leaps and bounds. There is a shortage of housing and traffic is knotted on the city streets and highways.

The climate in the Nile valley is mild and fairly constant year round fluctuating between 45 and 70 degrees in January and 70 and 90 degrees in July. Until the Aswan Dam was constructed and Lake Nasser formed, the river flooded annually pouring life-giving water over its banks and onto the desert sand. Today the fields along the river are irrigated by artificial means and, now that the river no longer pours its fertile silt over its banks, fertilizers are used to nourish the soil. But tourists who take a felucca boat trip on the Nile today may still see fisherman and women washing clothes along the shore just as they did thousands of years ago.

In the days of the Pharaohs the river and the sun were the two great factors of life and they formed the basis of religious belief. People believed the sun was born each day by the goddess Nut and traveled west to be swallowed by her at day's end. The waters of the Nile rose from the underworld, passed down the valley and dumped into the sea to go back from whence they came. The gods associated with the river and the sun were considered quite powerful and the people sought to placate them rather than risk their wrath. These gods are among the many depicted in the treasures of the pharaohs who ordered their tombs filled with furniture, robes and jewels for their use when they joined the gods in the after life.

The Nile is the soul of Egypt and a tour of the land of the Pharaohs naturally follows its course. In the south there is Lake Nasser, then the river flows north to Luxor, then Cairo and on to Alexandria on the Mediterranean Sea.

Luxor, once known as Thebes and once the capital of ancient Egypt, is where archaeologists Howard Carter and Lord Carnarvon found the treasure of Tutankhamun on a November day in 1922. Tut's tomb is here in the Valley of the Kings on the western bank of the Nile.

No other place in Egypt has left such a great heritage of ancient civilization than Luxor. Visitors from around the world are drawn to the region to explore the numerous monuments and temples scattered on both sides of the Nile.

On the eastern bank is the Temple of Luxor, dedicated to the god Amon. Here two colossal statues of Ramesses II sit before a massive pylon at the entrance of the temple. Next to the temple are relics of an ancient Christian church and the mosque of Abou el Hagag. About two miles north of Luxor Temple the Avenue of the Rams leads to the Karnak Temples which honor the deities Amon, Mut and Khonsu. Here is also the crescent-shaped sacred lake of the goddess Mut.

On the western bank of the Nile is a site known as the "City of the Dead" where the Valley of the Kings, the Valley of the Queens and the tombs of nobles can be found. The most important tombs are those of King Tut, Amenhotep II, Ramesses III, Ramesses VI, Horemheb and Queen Nefertari, wife of Ramesses II. The funerary temple of Ramesses II known as the Ramesseum, is particularly striking for its huge broken statue, weighing a thousand tons, which was overthrown by the Persians.

Moving north we come to Cairo, a city of old and new, and through it all runs the Nile adding a touch of tranquility to the daytime scene and reflecting the glittering lights of the city at night. There are skyscrapers and streets jammed with honking cabs and crowded buses. Step out onto the balcony of your posh hotel and there, marking the horizon just outside the city, are the pyramids at Giza.

The pyramids are, of course, what almost everyone thinks of when he thinks of Egypt and with good reason — the 5,000-year-old pyramids and the sphinx are among the seven wonders of the ancient world. The Great Pyramid covers 13.1 acres and its original height was 481.4 feet. Until medieval times polished limestone blocks encased the pyramids but the smooth rocks were taken and used for buildings in Cairo. Part of the original casing remains on the upper portion of the second pyramid which stands 471 feet in height. The third pyramid is only 218 feet high and the lower part has a casing of unfinished granite blocks. The sphinx has a lion's body and human face, probably that of the pharaoh Chephren. The face was mutilated by a ruler who disliked idolatry and later it was used for target practice.

A landmark in Cairo itself is the Citadel of Saladin which dates back to 1183 A.D. It contains several mosques and the Gawhara

Vintage sports cars on display at Henry Ford Museum

When was the last time you saw a 1917 Stutz Bearcat, a 1913 Mercer Raceabout or a 1911 Marion Bobcat?

All three vintage autos are on display along with dozens of others in Dearborn, Mich. as part of the annual Henry Ford Museum "Sports Cars in Review." The exhibit is open now through April 10 from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays and 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Sundays.

Weekend

The exhibit of more than forty automobiles includes a 1906 Pungs-Finch, 1907 Itala Speedster, 1910 Chadwick, 1913 Rolls Royce Alpine Eagle, 1925 Miller Junior Eight, a 1928 Bugatti Type 35B, 1929 Riley Brooklands, a 1930 Packard Speedster, a 1949 Delahaye and a 1954 Ford Comete. There are also 100 cast-iron and tin toy cars on display along with pedal cars and a unique half-scale MG which is electric powered.

A film on the history of the famous Sebring race is shown and a musical revue is presented in the Museum Theater.

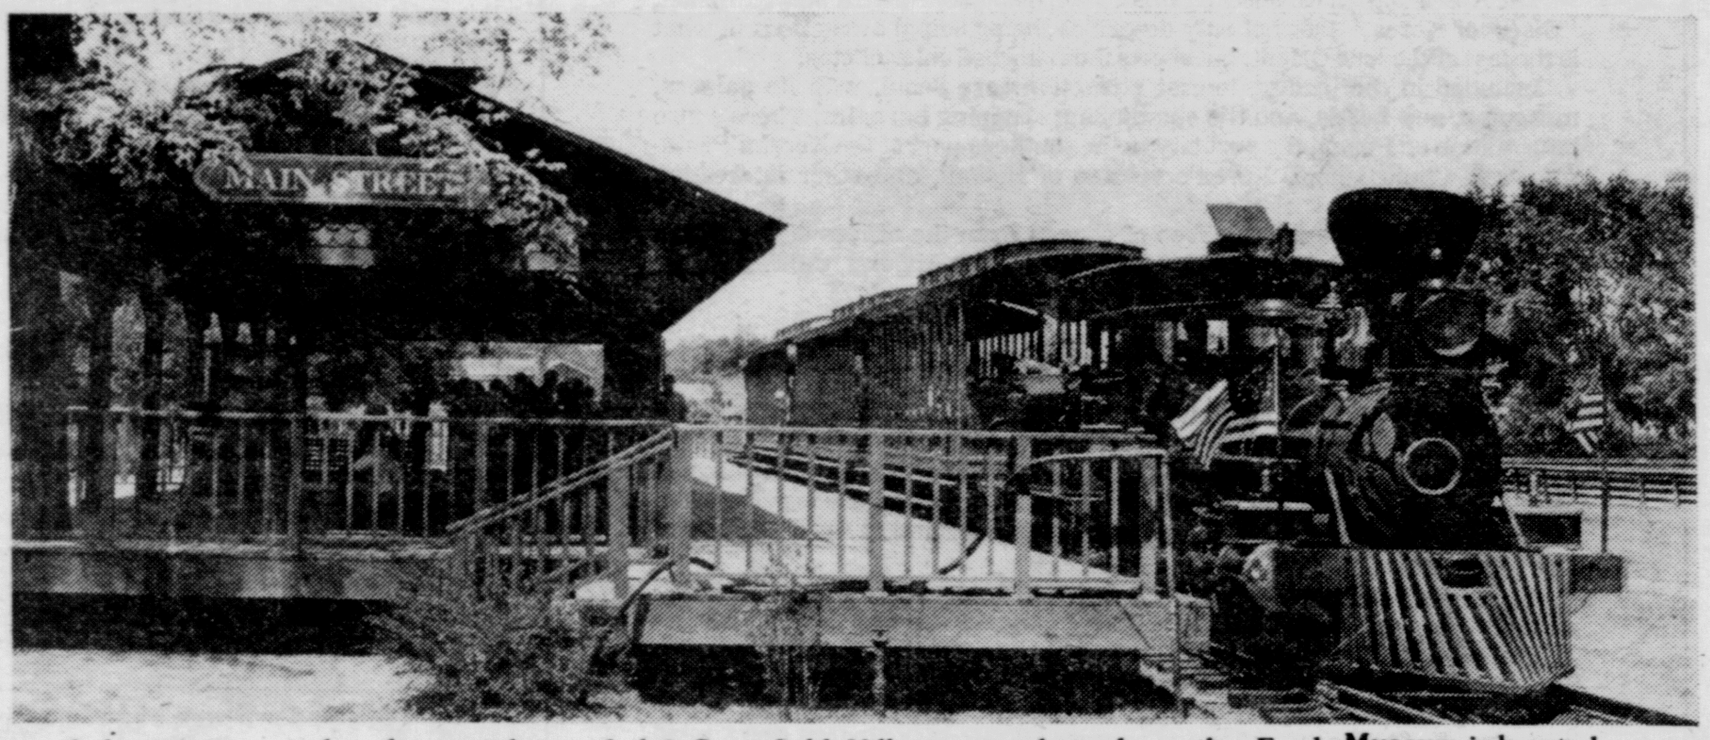
There is no additional charge for the Sports Cars in Review beyond the regular museum admission of $3 for adults and $1.25 for children age 6 through 12. The museum is about a six hour drive from the Northwest suburbs. It can be reached by taking I-94 to M39 (also called Southfield Expressway). Proceed north to the entrance of the museum.

The Henry Ford museum is just one of a complex of museums and historic points of interest on the 260-acre site. The museum's standard exhibits include unusual automobiles, a number of airplanes, exhibits of historical documents, displays of old machinery and displays of furniture and crystal dating to the 1700s.

Also in the complex is Greenfield Village with close to 100 historic buildings which were taken from all parts of the country and reassembled in Dearborn. There is the courthouse where Abraham Lincoln practiced law, the Cycle Shop owned by the Wright Brothers, and Thomas Edison's Menlo Park laboratory.

The amusement center in the complex is Suwanee Park which contains a penny arcade, a working steam locomotive which provides rides around the periphery of the complex, a steamboat which offers rides around an island, and horse drawn carriages which are available for rides in summer and sleigh rides in winter.

The Village Craft Center is yet another part of the complex. A working neighborhood of the 1840s, it features demonstrations by leather workers, potters, weavers, and tinsmiths.



A locomotive circles the periphery of the Greenfield Village complex where the Ford Museum is located.

Palace Museum which was the official residence of Egypt's rulers until the 19th Century. Some of the famous mosques in Cairo are Mohamed Ali Mosque, the Mosque of Ibn Tulun and the Al Azhar Mosque which is one of the oldest universities of the world. Moslem students from all over the world study there today, seated on red carpets.

Museums are an important stop on itineraries in Cairo. At the top of the list is the Egyptian Museum which has Pharaonic treasures covering a period of 5,000 years. The treasures of Tutankhamun are normally housed here and occupy almost an entire floor. There's also a Coptic Museum in Cairo with a rare collection of objects dating back to the Christian era. Among the numerous museums in Cairo are also an Islamic Art Museum, Military Museum and Agricultural Museum.

Other points of interest in Cairo are the Tower of Cairo which offers a panoramic view of the city and Khan el Khalili which is a famous bazaar of oriental goods including gold and precious stones.

On the Mediterranean Sea is the famous port city of Alexandria, built in 32 B.C. by Alexander the Great. It was at one time the capital of Egypt and center of Greek culture and civilization.

Points of interest in Alexandria include the Al Montazah Palace, the summer residence of the former royal family which contains a museum, a casino and hotel; the Nousha Gardens, Zoological Gardens, Antoniadis Gardens and Montazah Gardens; the Graeco/Roman Museum; Pompey's Pillar; the Roman Amphitheatre; and the Fort of Kayyet Bay which is the site of the old Pharos lighthouse.

Alexandria today is a busy port and popular summer resort area known for its beautiful beaches. Here on the delta the Nile leaves Egypt, spilling into the Mediterranean where it will, so the ancient Egyptians believed, return to the underworld to surface again at its headwaters to make the long, historic journey north once more. §

Korean travel brochure free for the writing

The Korea National Tourism Corporation has just printed a new pamphlet, "Discover Korea," that not only describes the principal attractions of what is the last of the true Orient, but shows them in good color photos.

Included in the leading tourist attractions are Seoul, with its palaces, museums, new hotels, and the outstanding shopping bargains. There's also information on Pusan, the port city in the southern part of the Korean Peninsula, and Cheju Island, Korea's version of Hawaii, and other interesting places.

The pamphlet is available free of charge from the offices of the Korea National Tourism Corporation, 510 West 6th St., Los Angeles, Calif. 90014, or 460 Park Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022.

SAS offers tour of Egypt beginning this fall

An eleven-day Egyptian tour with a day and night in Copenhagen for $1,175 is being offered by Scandinavian Airlines.

This first-class tour will depart Chicago's O'Hare International Airport monthly from September 19 through April, 1978. The price includes all meals. There will be a $100 additional charge in September and in April because of fare regulations.

A total of five days will be spent in Cairo with escorted visits to the Pyramids of Giza, the Sphinx, the Cairo Museum, the Bazaar and other places.

From Luxor tour passengers will explore the remnants of ancient Egypt: the temples of Luxor and Karnak and the below-the-ground royal tombs at the Necropolis of Thebes, the celebrated tomb of King Tutankhamun.

Aswan, the third stop, will be the jumping off place for a tour of Abu Simbel where the two temples carved out of a rock cliff 3,200 years ago were dedicated to the great Ramesses II and his famous wife, Queen Nefertari. Destined to be innundated by the rising waters of the Aswan Dam, the temples and their four 67-foot high statues were cut into 1,050 blocks and reassembled into the side of a man-made concrete mountain.

1977 camping guide lists 19,000 campgrounds

If you want to find a nice, quiet place to read a book, commune with nature, or live it up with other outdoor types, the 1977 Rand McNally Campground & Trailer Park Guide has some good news for you.

After being hit hard by the twin blows of recession and oil embargo aftershocks, the campground business continues a steady recovery. There has been a net gain of more than 400 new public and privately operated campgrounds in the United States since the 1976 edition, plus a gain of more than 100 in Canada.

The Rand McNally guide lists, locates and describes nearly 19,000 campgrounds in the United States, Canada and Mexico. This year it also provides several timely, entertaining and informative articles on subjects ranging from houseboat camping to a primer on CB radio, treasure hunting with electronic gear, and even how to read and forecast your own weather. It also lists for the first time campgrounds having Citizens Band radio base stations, channels they monitor, and their call letters.

Concordia College Europe tour open to public

Concordia Teachers College in River Forest is planning a four week bike-rail tour of France and West Germany. The tour will travel along the back woods and experience the country life of Europe's two largest nations. The tour is open to the general public and although four hours of college credit is offered, one can take the tour on an audit basis.

The tour cost is $900 and departs on May 29. More information is available by contacting the Center for Continuing Education at 771-8300, ext. 310 or 364.

Peru sites and hotels crowded by tourists

Tourists, coming to Peru in ever-increasing numbers on inexpensive charter flights, are beginning to overwhelm the facilities in Peru's prime attractions, Macchu Pichu and Cuzco.

Travel agents here say there will not be enough middle and lower-priced hotels in Cuzco, the ancient capital of tne Incas, for the summer season.

More railroad cars for the train to Macchu Pichu, the lost mountaintop Inca city, and more flights between Lima and Cuzco, are also needed.

Outdoor adventure tours depicted in catalog

More than seventy expeditions ranging from river-running to camel caravans, from country walks to mountaineering expeditions are described in a new 64-page illustrated catalog offered by Mountain Travel, Inc.

Trips last from two to seven weeks; prices range from $800 to $3,375. For information and free catalog write: Mountain Travel, Inc., 1398 Solano Ave., Albany, Calif. 94706.

Protect your home from theft while you're away on vacation

As you hop in the car and head off to the mountains — or is it the beach this year — you are confident that this is going to be the best vacation ever.

But is it?, asks the Insurance Information Institute. If you haven't remembered to take a few precautions to prevent burglars from breaking into your home while you're away, this may turn out to be the worst vacation ever.

A prowler enters someone's home every 15 seconds in this country. Of the $400 million worth of goods stolen each year, only 5 per cent is recovered. Vacationers are particularly subject to burglary because often they do not take the basic precautions which help prevent illegal entry into their homes.

To discourage burglars:

- Lock all outside doors and windows, as well as garage doors.
- During the nighttime hours, use plug-in timers to turn on lights, televisions and radios.
- Have milk, newspaper and other deliveries discontinued during your absence.
- Have your telephone temporarily disconnected. Burglars often call before commiting a robbery to see if anyone is at home.
- Arrange for lawn care and removal of circulars.
- Have the post office forward or hold your mail, or have neighbors collect it daily.
- Ask a neighbor or relative to check your home periodically to be sure light timers are working and to vary the lights and position of drapes.
- Don't leave extra keys in such obvious places as the mailbox, door mat or flower pots.
- Tell your local police department how long you'll be away so they can check your house occasionally while you're gone.

For the best protection possible, police recommend double cylinder deadbolt locks for all entry doors. This type lock must be opened by a key on both sides, and thus prevents a thief from merely breaking out a door glass, reaching inside and unlocking the door.

Sliding glass doors are a special problem, but precautions can be taken. Place a sturdy wooden or metal rod, such as a broom handle cut to fit, into the sliding jamb at the bottom of the door to keep it safely closed.

There are now available several varieties of inexpensive battery-powered alarms which, when activated, produce a loud, startling sound when anyone attempts to jimmy or force open a door or window. The unexpected noise is often enough to scare away a burglar, and can also alert neighbors or police.

movie guide

Designed to help readers decide which movies they want to see, this guide includes a listing of movies currently playing in the Northwest suburban area plus capsule summaries and comments based on reports of the Independent Film Journal, for selected films of interest to readers.

"A Star Is Born" — The perpetual presence of Barbra Streisand looms large over this lavish remake of the twice-told Hollywood classic, updated to the rock music scene of the 1970s with Kris Kristofferson as the falling star she romances and finally eclipses. Streisand's very good and so's the music, but the story — and potential emotional involvement — have been badly diluted by the imbalance of her excesses. (R)

"Slap Shot" — Paul Newman plays the aging player-coach of a third-rate local hockey team in George Roy Hill's vulgar, violent and exuberantly funny look at the casual brutality and lowlife mentality that characterize the sport. Obscene lanugage and bonecrushing action may offend many, but it's all played for liberating laughs. (R)

"Rocky" — Sylvester Stallone wrote the script and stars as the title character in this small, unpretentious and genuinely involving story of a local clubhouse prizefighter who gets a chance-of-a-lifetime shot at the world heavyweight title and finds love and self-respect along the way. (PG).

"Network" — The quartet of award-caliber performances by Peter Finch, Faye Dunaway, Robert Duvall and William Holden is a whopping show in itself in this biting look at a television network, the cutthroat tactics rampant behind-the-scenes and the questionable message delivered by the medium to its viewers. (R).

ARLINGTON — Arlington Heights — 255-2125 — "A Star is Born" (R)

TREAS
TUTANI

by Kurt Baer

British archaeologist Howard Carter had been searching Egypt's sun-baked Valley of the Kings for ten years, sifting more than 200,000 tons of sand and rock in a fruitless search for the lost tomb of Tukankhamun.

His lordly sponsor, the fifth Earl of Carnarvon, was impatient. He already had spent 20,000 pounds, well over $500,000 in today's dollars, on Carter's diggings and was ready to abandon the project.

Desperately Carter begged for two months more time, promising that, if the tomb were not found, he would pay for the work himself.

On Nov. 26, 1922, Carter stood before the tomb's outer door. The excitement in his body was kinetic. He carefully bore a small hole in the upper left hand corner of the portal.

"Darkness and blank space, as far as an iron testing rod could reach, showed that whatever lay beyond was empty," Carter wrote in his journal.

"Widening the hole a little, I inserted the candle and peered in... At first I could see nothing, the hot air escaping from the chamber causing the candle flame to flicker, but presently, as my eyes grew accustomed to the light, details of the room within emerged slowly from the mist, strange animals, statues, and gold — everywhere the glint of gold.

"For the moment — an eternity it must have seemed to others standing by — I was struck dumb with amazement, and when Lord Carnarvon, unable to stand the suspense any longer, inquired anxiously, 'Ca things" indeed await visitors to ld Museum of Natural History where ary exhibition of the "Treasures of " opens April 15.

res of Tutankhamun is more than a museum collection of beautiful and priceless art objects coldly displayed in glass cases. It is an experience. The tomb of the boy-king Tut has been recreated so that visitors share the excitement of entering the tomb and moving through its chambers.

Huge photographs, made from original negatives taken during the excavation in 1922-23, and quotes from Carter's journals create a theatrical set for the visitor.

Not since the exhibition of French Impressionist painters at the Art Institute has a museum program created such anticipation in Chicago.

More than 830,000 visitors lined up for the Tut exhibit during its four-month debut, Nov. 15, 1976 to March 15, 1977, at the National Gallery of Art, Washington D.C. They camped over night in sleeping bags, and some waited up to nine hours to get in.

In Chicago, where the Tut exhibition runs to Aug. 15, museum officials say they are ready for a million curious visitors. The comparison may be blasphemous, but the 3,000-year-old Treasures of Tutankhamun may draw more fans this summer than either of Chicago's two baseball teams.

What visitors will see, courtesy of the Egyptian government which has loaned the treasures, are jeweled and golden relics of extraordinary beauty and craftsmanship. The allure and mystery of ancient Egyptian eyes rivet the viewers' own. And in the center, the solid-gold mummy mask of Tutankhamun challenges our ideas of mortality itself.

Amulets, bracelets, earrings and collars worked in gold and inlaid with glass and semi-precious stones glow in colors of amber, blue, red and green.

Unguent jars, which held rare oils and creams, are carved from ivory and alabaster in the playful form of animals. The gilded goddess Skelket, one of four goddesses that guarded Tutankhamun's mummified remains, is poised with outstretched arms and possessed of a sensual grace.

Visitors first enter an Orientation Gallery in which they are introduced to Egyptian life, art, death and belief in the life hereafter. Photographs show the ancient burial ground, the Valley of the Kings, and the entrance to the tomb as it was originally unearthed.

A corridor, which simulates the passageway that Carter and Lord Carnarvon walked to reach the tomb's inner door, leads the museum visitor to a spotlighted wooden head of the boy Tutankhamun as the sun god emerging from a blue lotus flower. The model was put in the tomb so that Tutankhamun would have an instrument whereby he could be reborn as the sun every day.

The Antechamber, where the painted wooden head is displayed, was the biggest room in the original tomb, measuring 26 by 12 feet. It was packed with beds, rare animal-shaped couches, vases, chariots, boxes and weapons.

"So crowded were they that it was a matter of extreme difficulty to move one without running serious risk of damaging others," Carter wrote, "and in some cases they were so inextricably tangled that an elaborate system of props and supports had to be devised to hold one object or group of objects in place while others were being removed."

A door in the right wall of the Antechamber led to the Burial Chamber in which the most precious items were stored, including all of Tutankhamun's personal jewelry. Museum visitors too will pass from the Antechamber to the burial room.

The king was encased in three separate coffins, and as workers used ropes and wire to separate the second coffin from the outer coffin, Carter was puzzled by the body's enormous weight. Shortly he discovered the reason: the innermost coffin was made of solid gold.

The Treasury is the next room in the exhibit. In it is a rare and unusually realistic sculpture of the king harpooning from a boat of papyrus stems. Tutankhamun is probably hunting a hippopotamus of Seth, the god of evil, which is not depicted because its presence in the tomb would have been a source of danger to the king.

A model boat, one of seven that were stacked in the Treasury, underscores the importance of river transportation and sailing in Egyptian culture. Another statue depicts a brilliantly gilded Tutankhamun standing on the back of a black leopard. It is thought to represent Tut's passage through the underworld.

"It is not a black 'panther' in the zoological sense," says the exhibition catalog. "The underworld was dark and its inhabitants, human, animal and divine, lived in darkness and were therefore represented in black, the color of darkness. It would have been inappropriate to depict the king in black because he was associated with the source of light, namely the sun god, who passed through the underworld each night, bringing a brief spell of light to its inhabitants."

Several writing instruments also are displayed, including an ornately carved pen holder. Tutankhamun, however, may have been unable to write.

The visitor leaves by way of the Annex. Smallest room in the original tomb (6 by 9 feet), it was filled with baskets, jars, flasks, chests and unguent jars filled with provisions and clothes for the dead king.

Four gameboards also were discovered in the Annex. The most elaborate is mounted on four cat paws resting on gilded cushions. The board is ebony with thirty-five inlaid ivory squares. It is believed that Tut played at least two games —

One of four miniature coffins that contained Tutankhamun's internal organs is made of beaten gold inlaid with colored glass and carnelian. The mummy bears some resemblance to Tutankhamun but it may actually have been made for a half-brother and used because of Tutankhamun's unexpected death.

The graceful goddess Selket is one of four goddesses who guarded the shrine containing Tutankhamun's mummified organs. Her emblem, a scorpion, sits atop her head. Selket was known to the Egyptians for her control of magic and is associated with funerals, childbirth and nursing.

A carved alabaster goat is one of several animal-shaped unguent jars found in Tutankhamun's tomb. Animal and bird-shaped vessels were made early in Egypt's history, but apparently fell out of fashion until the Eighteenth Dynasty. The single remaining horn is carved from a real animal horn.

A chair, only 28 inches tall, was thought to be made for Tutankhamun when he was a boy. The wood is probably ebony, decorated with ivory inlay and gilded side panels showing ibex goats and desert plants. It is typical of the period.

This magnificent gold collar has 260 segments inlaid with glass and obsidian. It was placed on the chest of Tutankhamun's mummy. The vulture goddess, Nekhbet, is associated with Upper Egypt, and was one of the pharaoh's protective gods. In each claw, she holds a "shen," Egyptian symbol of infinity.

TREASURES

"Thieves" and "Passing" — since the board is reversible.

Last stop for the museum visitor is a gift shop. Obviously not part of the original tomb, it is nevertheless an important part of the Treasures of Tutankhamun. Four publications and reproductions of Tutankhamun's jewelry and sculpture will be on sale.

Net proceeds from the sale of books and reproductions will be donated to the Organization of Eyptian Antiquities for the renovation of the Cairo Museum and the Graeco-Roman Museum in Alexandria.

Books include "Treasures of Tutankhamun," a catalog of the exhibition including sixty-four pages of color pictures, $6.95; "Tutankhamun: His Tomb and Its Treasures," 256 pages including 100 color photographs, $35; "Wonderful Things: The Discovery of the Tomb of Tutankhamun," a picture book of Harry Burton's photographs of the original excavation with text taken from Carter's Journal, $3.95; and "Tutankhamun's Jewelry," including forty-seven color photographs, $3.95.

Jewelry and sculpture reproductions are priced at $5 to $1,500.

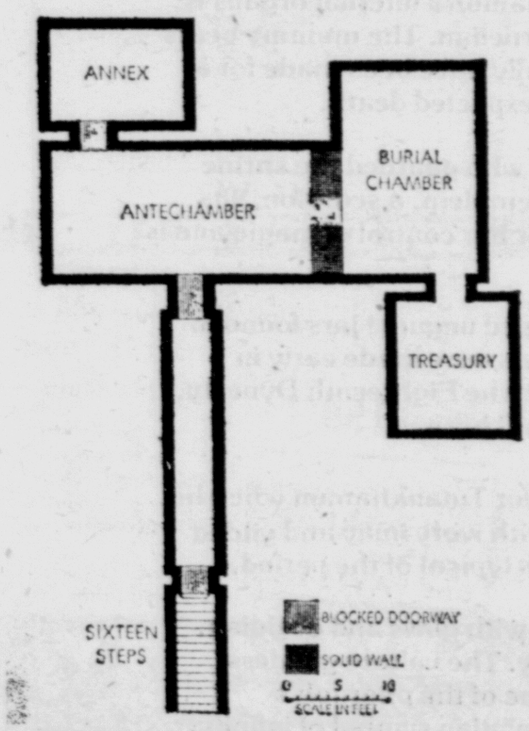
In all, there are fifty-five pieces in the exhibition, chosen from the 5,000 articles found in the tomb, to mark the 55th anniversary of Carter's discovery.

The Field Museum has been working since last August to build the tomb. The exhibit itself is very carefully guarded. Curators from the Cairo museum travel with the articles.

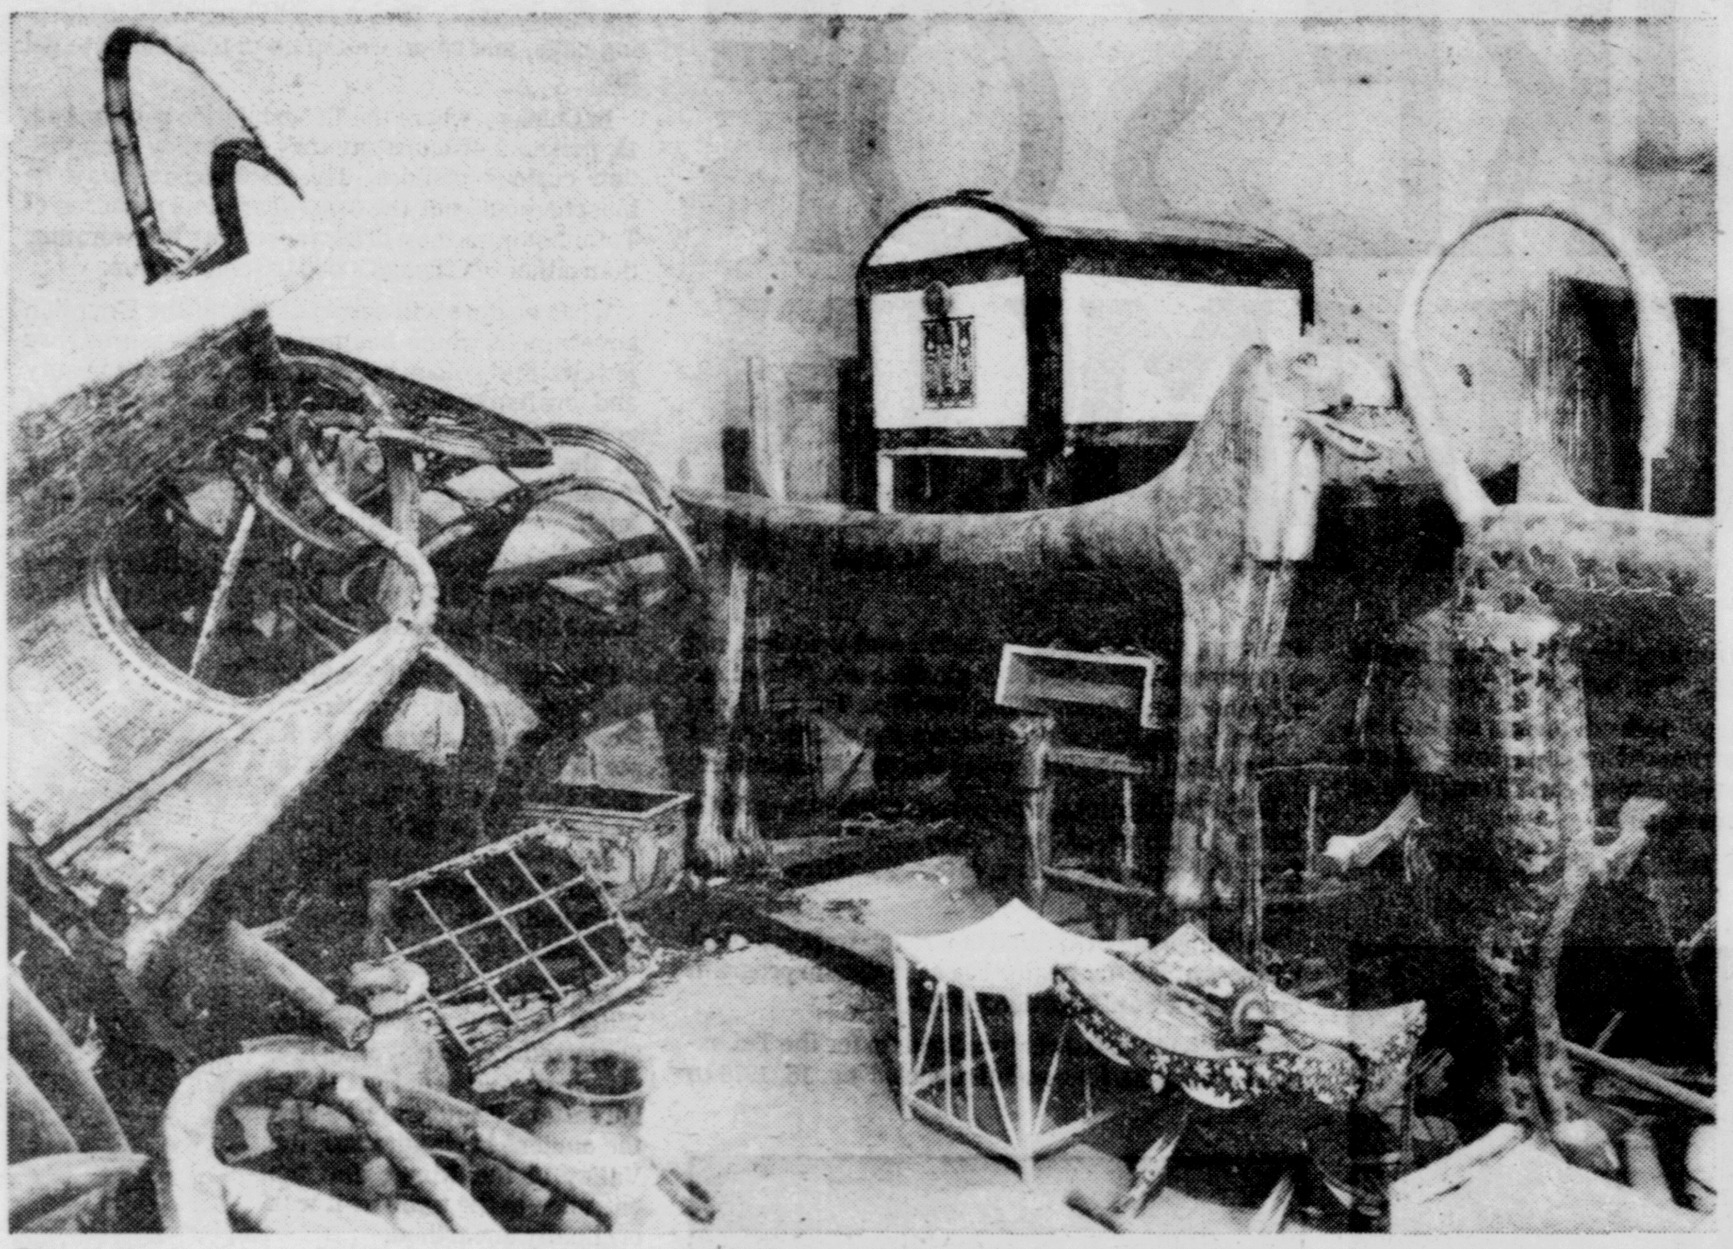
It is impossible to insure the priceless treasures except through a special law, the Arts and Artifacts Indemnity Act, signed into law by former President Ford on Dec. 20, 1975.

Two ships in the U.S. Navy's Sixth Fleet, the U.S.S. Milwaukee and the U.S.S. Sylvania, were used to bring the masterpieces to the United States with what experts say was "precise gentleness."

Carter called the discovery of Tutankhamun's tomb, "the day of days, the most wonderful I have ever lived through." Chicagoans have a chance to share in the wonder by visiting the Field Museum, Lake Shore Drive at Roosevelt Road, April 15 to Aug. 15.§



Layout of the tomb of Tutankhamun.



This is the first room in the tomb of Tutankhamun as it was found by archaeologists in 1922. The model folding stool on the lower right-hand side of the photograph is one of the objects in the Tutankhamun exhibition. At the time of his reign, a woman might sit on a chair or a rigid stool but not on a folding stool, which was a male prerogative.

THE BOY KING OF EGYPT

by Kurt Baer

"To speak the name of the dead is to make them live again," the ancient Egyptians believed.

Tutankhamun, "King Tut," the boy-king of Egypt, will come to life for millions of Americans who will wonder at his treasures during an historic, two and a half year exhibition in six American cities.

The Egyptians believed their dead king Tutankhamun would be reborn, so they packed his tomb with objects that he would need in the life hereafter.

Haunting in their design and exquisitely crafted, the objects are useful clues to Tutankhamun's otherwise little-known life and reign.

Four gameboards in ebony and ivory suggest that the king enjoyed playing the games "Passing" and "Thieves," ancient forerunners of modern parlor games.

Whimsical unguent jars made in the form of animals, with their tongues out and paws raised, and small stools are reminders that Tutankhamun was a boy-king who ascended to the throne in 1334 B.C. when he was only nine years old, and died of unknown causes in 1325 B.C. at the age of about 18.

Buried in a small tomb, probably originally built for a relative, Tutankhamun and his treasures somehow escaped the heavy looting that took place in the tombs of other Egyptian pharaohs. He rested 3,000 years in the Valley of the Kings before being discovered in 1922 by British archaeologist Howard Carter and his patron, the Earl of Carnarvon, in what is regarded as one of the world's most sensational archaeological finds.

Tutankhamun lived during one of the Golden Ages of the Egyptian Empire. The wealth and artistry of the objects on display are startling. The world-famous funeral mask, for example, is solid gold, an eighth of an inch thick, and so carefully made that experts believe it is a near exact representation of the king's face.

His reign, though short, is important in Egyptian history because it marked a return to poly-theism in the country.

Akhenaton (king 1350-1334 B.C.), Tutankhamun's probable father, led the Egyptians away from the worship of many gods to the recognition of one, all-powerful sun god called Aton. Originally pictured with the head of a falcon on a human body, Aton came to be shown as a disc with radiating rays that ended in hands holding the symbols of all life and dominion in Egypt.

"Throughout Egypt the temples of the old gods were shut down. The names and representations of the god Amun in particular were expunged from monuments, including temples and tomb chapels, and occasionally even the plural word 'gods' was erased. Sacred images reposing in the shrines of the old temples were destroyed, while traditional rituals were abandoned and mythologies were discarded, being incompatible with Akhenaton's more rational religious thinking," says Edward F. Wente, professor of Egyptology at the University of Chicago, writing in the exhibition catalog.

It was a radical, heretical theology that fostered a new, more natural style of Egyptian art that is apparent in the Tutankhamun treasures.

Art moved away from the flat and stilted forms that are popularly thought of in connection with Egyptian hieroglyphics, and became fresh and life-like.

Akhenaton's queen was the beautiful Nefertiti. But historians believe Tutankhamun's mother was probably one of Akhenaton's minor wives. Nefertiti is thought to have borne only girls.

Tutankhamun was married as a child to Ankhesenpaaton, a daughter of Akhenaton and Nefertiti. Such an incestuous marriage was a way of ensuring Tut's right to the Egyptian throne.

Dissension over the new religion grew during the early years of Tutankhamun's reign, and gradually the traditional gods were restored. Tutankhamun returned the Egyptian capital to Thebes from where it had been moved by Akhenaton in connection with the building of a magnificent open-air temple to the sun god.

"Whereas Akhenaton's reformation had been intolerant of the existence of the old gods, the counter-reformation under Tutankhamun was more charitable and broad-minded," Wente says. "At issue was not the specific name of the god, but the nature of the divine."

Tutankhamun's death seems to have been unexpected. The size and arrangement of the tomb in which he was buried indicates that it was probably intended for a commoner and was hastily converted for a royal burial. Workmen had just ten weeks to complete the elaborate funeral preparations since mummification itself took seventy days.

Wente provides the following description: "The corpse was mummified on the west side of the Nile. After the internal organs, except the heart, had been removed, the body was packed in a dry mineral called natron for dehydration. The resins, gums and oils were used to embalm the body, which was carefully wrapped in linen bandages and adorned with amulets and other jewelry.

"Meanwhile, the liver, lungs, stomach and intestines, which had been treated separately, were usually placed in four containers called Canopic jars. In the case of Tutankhamun, the organs were placed in four miniature coffins, which in turn were deposited in a Canopic chest, the four cavities were capped with lids bearing the king's likeness. The chest was enclosed in a shrine guarded by four statuettes of the goddesses Isis, Nephthys, Selket and Neith. The miniature organ coffin, alabaster lids and the gold goddess Selket are included in the exhibit.

"After the mummy had been wrapped and provided with a mask, it was drawn on a canopied sledge to the tomb. Tutankhamun's sledge was hauled by the highest officials of the state, perhaps to the funerary temple and then on to the tomb, where the interment of the pharaoh marked his entrance into the netherworld."

There is evidence that Tutankhamun's tomb was broken into twice by grave robbers, probably shortly after the burial. The first robbers, perhaps aided by corrupt guards, took some gold and semi-precious stones. The second time they apparently stole costly oils and unguents.

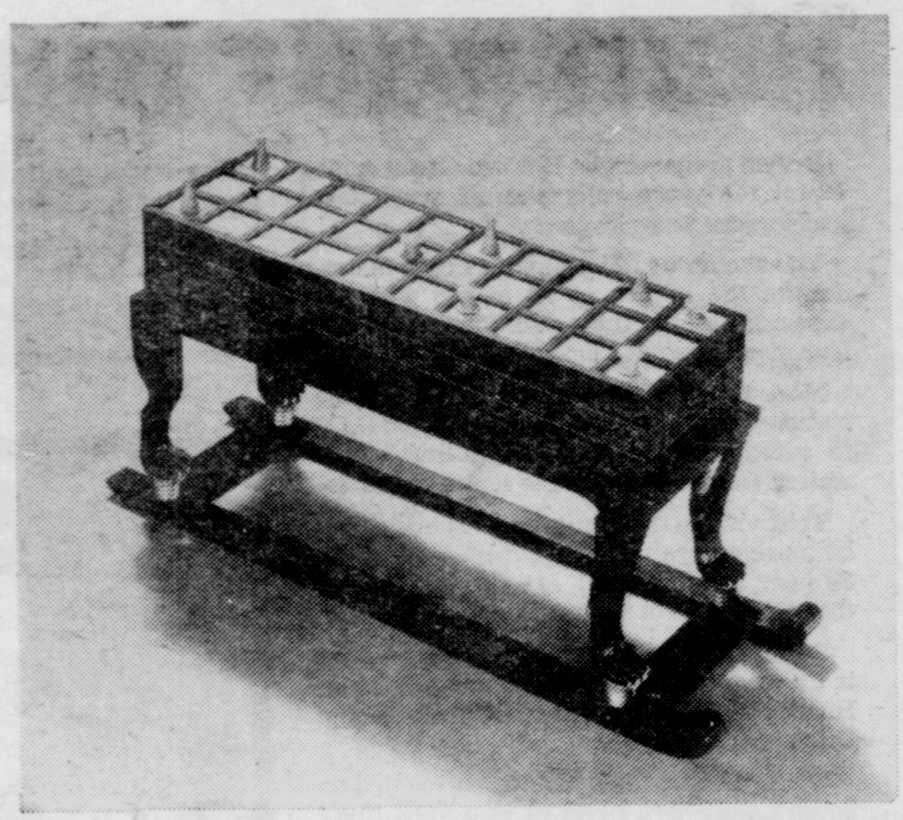
But the thievery was minimal compared to the wholesale plundering that occurred at other royal tombs. Tut was buried in an atypical location to begin with, and in later years, the entrance to his tomb was covered up by mud slides and construction debris from the tomb of Ramesses VI, who lived about 200 years after Tut.

Tutankhamun's mummy and its priceless treasures survived virtually untouched until 1922.

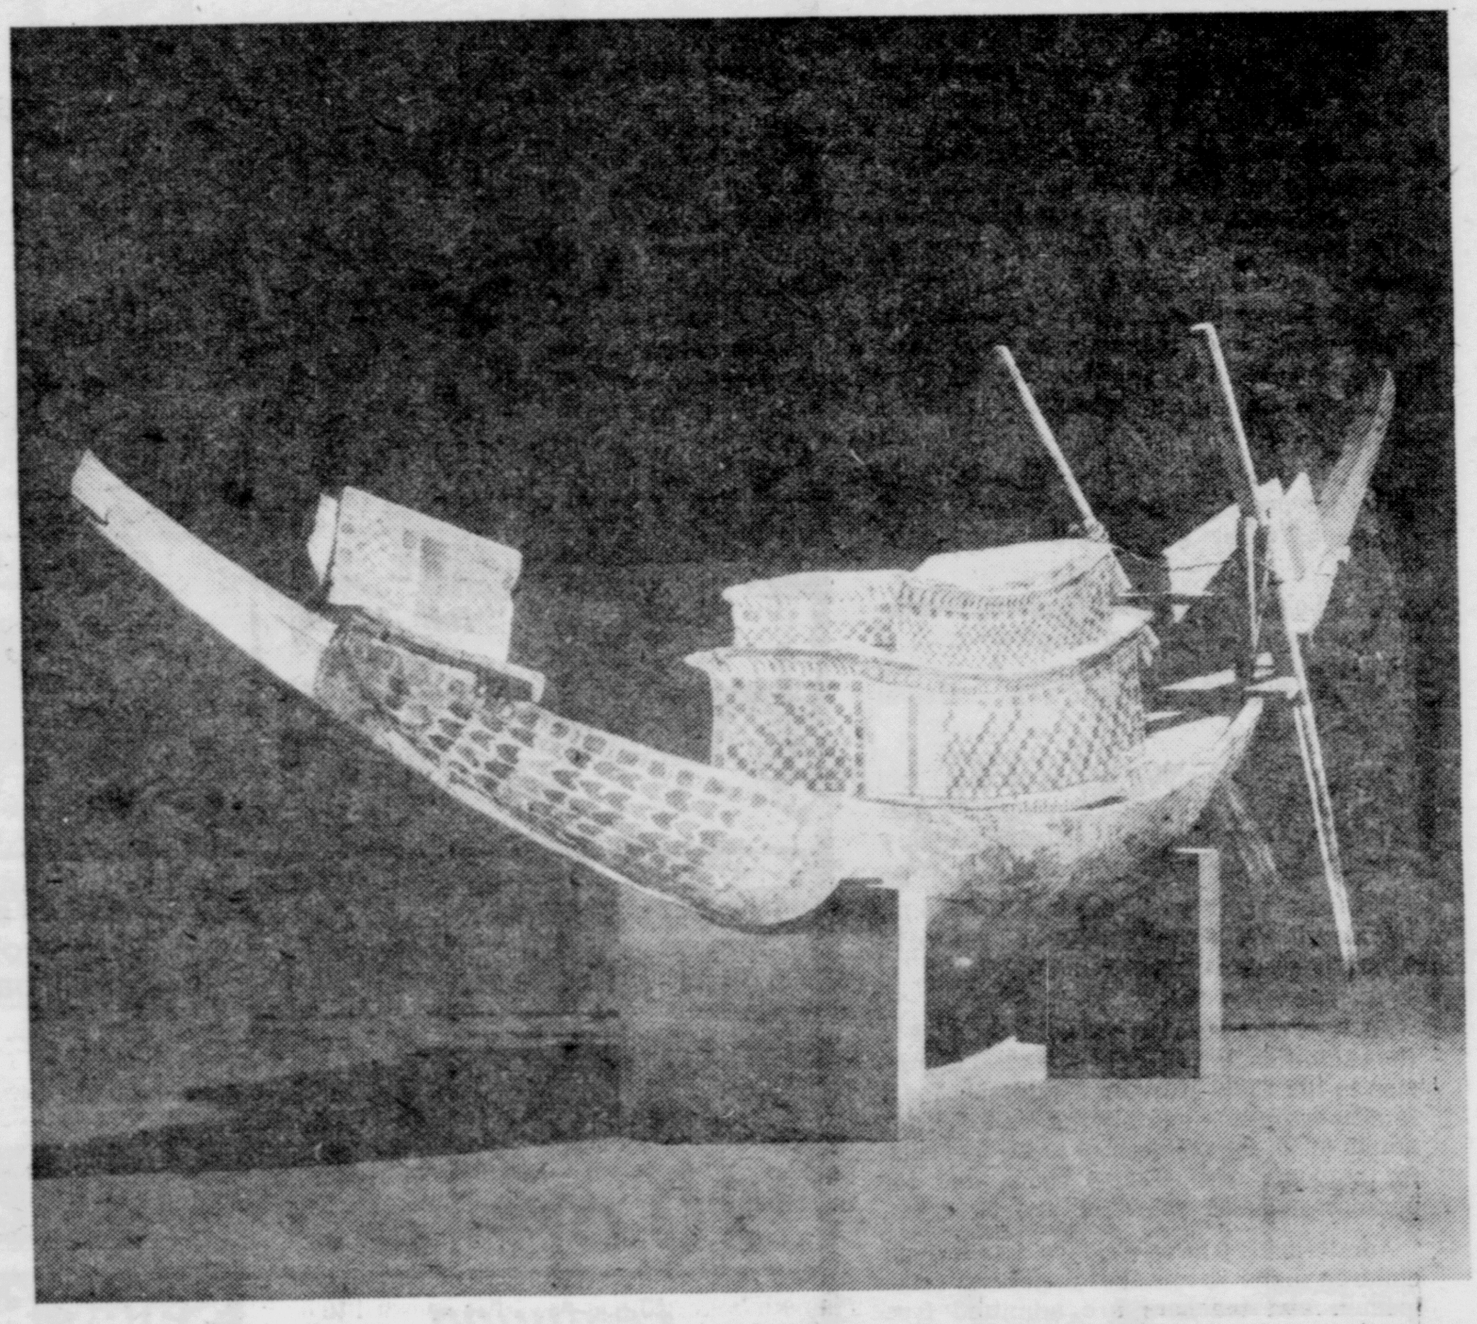
"There is some reason to suspect that the richness of Tutankhamun's burial was extraordinary, and some of the objects, like an elegant figure of the king's mummy (included in the exhibit), were actually donated by private citizens," says Wente.

"Perhaps Tutankhamun's magnificent burial, with all its gilt and gold, was less a tribute to his youthful person than an expression of the community's feeling of relief at the restoration of the old gods and traditions.

"Perhaps Tutankhamun was, even in death, more a concept than a personality."§



The gameboard is the largest of four found in the tomb. Judging from the number of boards buried with him, the game must have been his favorite pastime and was described in the Book of the Dead as one of the occupations of the deceased person in the next world.



This model boat is one of seven that were stacked in the Treasury of the tomb. It is thought to represent a barge towed on some formal occasion.

Carved from a single piece of wood, this model consists of a figure of Tutankhamun wrapped in a shroud and lying on a bed. Beside the body are small figures of a falcon and a human-headed bird, each with one wing protectively laid on the body of the king.

Plan your museum visit carefully

British archaeologist Howard Carter hunted for ten years before he discovered the treasures of Tutankhamun.

You should be able to move much faster, despite the million or so people who are expected to visit the exhibition during its four-month stay at Chicago's Field Museum.

More than 830,000 persons flocked to the National Gallery of Art in Washington D.C., to catch a glimpse of the glitter; some waited for as long as nine hours to get in.

Your visit to this remarkable showing can be more enjoyable if it's carefully planned. So here, in a nutshell, are the facts about the "Treasures of Tutankhamun."

WHO: The exhibition is being co-sponsored in Chicago by the Field Museum of Natural History and the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago.

WHERE: The Field Museum is located on South Lake Shore Drive at Roosevelt Road in Chicago. The telephone number for Tut information is 663-0450.

WHAT: The Egyptian government has made an unprecedented loan of fifty-five of the more than 5,000 treasures from the tomb of the boy-king Tutankhamun (1334-1325 B.C.) The objects are displayed in a stylized recreation of the pharaoh's four-room tomb discovered in 1922 in the Valley of the Kings, Egypt.

Chief among the objects is the solid-gold funeral mask of Tutankhamun, inlaid with carnelian, lapis lazuli, colored glass and quartz; one of the most remarkable effigies in the world.

No less stunning is the wooden gilt statuette of the goddess, Selket, one of four goddesses who guarded the gilded shrine that housed Tutankhamun's mummified organs.

Other objects include a figure of Tutankhamun harpooning, a small gold shrine of remarkable craftsmanship and an assortment of jewelry and furniture discovered in the tomb.

WHEN: The exhibit opens at the Field Museum on April 15, and continues to Aug. 15, after which time it will travel to New Orleans, Los Angeles, Seattle and New York.

Museum hours will be 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Wednesday, and 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Thursday through Sunday.

HOW: There is no special admission fee to the exhibition, but there is a general admission to the Field Museum. Admission for a family (parents and children) is $3.50, for adults $1.50, for children (6 to 17) 50 cents, for students with IDs 50 cents, and for persons over 65 years of age 35 cents.

Admission is free on Fridays. In addition, children under 6, museum members, servicemen and teachers are admitted free every day.

Persons entering the museum will be given a number and closed-circuit television monitors located throughout the museum will show the numbers as they are being admitted to the special exhibit. With this system, visitors should not have to wait in line, but can roam the rest of the museum, including the Ancient Egyptian Hall.

The museum is making reservations for groups. Persons should call or write for detailed information on group scheduling.

Photographing the Tutankhamun exhibit will not be permitted.

WHY: The Egyptian loan of the treasures was first announced in June 1974, in a joint communique by former President Richard Nixon and Egyptian President Anwar el-Sadat during a Nixon visit to Egypt.

Sadat expressed hope that the treasures could tour the U.S. as a firm indication of the good will between the two nations.

The final agreement was signed in 1975 by former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy.

Participating museums are selling four Tut publications, including an illustrated color catalog of the exhibit for $6.95. Reproductions of the objects and jewelry in the exhibit also will be on sale priced from $5 to $1,500.

Net proceeds will be donated to the organization of Egyptian Antiquities for the major renovation of the Cairo Museum and the Graeco-Roman Museum in Alexandria, Egypt. — K.B.

A divorce lawyer confesses to winning

by Dorothy Oliver

You know Herb Glieberman is a winner. You know it on page 1 when he tells you, "A few minutes from now, in court, that will all change. I'll have to be ready to take command, meet any crisis that arises, because $250,000 and a human life are riding on it..." You know it on page 179 when Mark grabs his arm and says emotionally, "Herb...you did it. Thank you. No one but you could have done it." and Herb relates, "Ten minutes later, out in the corridor, awaiting the elevator, I'm still thinking about it, wondering if I am the only one who could have won this case today..."

Herbert Glieberman, Lincolnwood resident, Chicago divorce lawyer, specializes in winning. He has been a winner since childhood: "As a young boy, I was often chosen on teams before the older, bigger kids because I had a reputation for figuring out a way to do something to beat the other team..."

And he is a winner today: "(The judge) can be bored with what you're saying or, on occasion, he can be fascinated by it. If he's bored, I've found it reduces my chances of gaining what I want from ½ to 1½ per cent. Not much? Add up a percentage point here, a half a percentage point there, one for this and one for that, and you not only get the difference between winning and losing now and then, but a sum that adds up to millions of dollars for my clients over the course of a year. And that definitely adds up to my being less than the best..."

Glieberman has been a practicing attorney for the past 24 years, moving from a corporate law firm at age 27 into private practice as a divorce lawyer. He chose a "people" practice in an area that, at that point, had few specialists.

Today he is nothing less than successful, handling complex cases, referrals from other attorneys and corporations, acting as a consultant for other lawyers. He has encountered all manner of people and problems, becoming involved in vicious custody battles, bizarre sex cases — everything from the simple, silent divorce to the all out war.

Glieberman put his experiences into book form two years ago with the Regnery publication of "Confessions of a Divorce Lawyer," which is being released now in paperback by Ballantine ($1.95).

Herbert Glieberman has been a winner since childhood.

He worked three years on the manuscript in a manner that's typical of the Glieberman driving style:

"I didn't have the luxury of time most writers have because I have a very active practice. So I would get up at 3 a.m. seven days a week and write for two to three hours. I have written and lectured extensively but it was all academic work, different from writing a novel. I wrote this book like I spoke."

Glieberman had compiled a great deal of information on cases he has tried, using it for a speech here and an article there. For the book he sorted through the material gleaning a few cases he felt were typical. The pain and problems of a divorce jump from the pages.

There are Betty and Larry fighting for custody of their six-year-old daughter. Betty had her name tatooed on the child's arm so the little girl would never forget her mother. Then there was George who suspected his wife Valerie of cheating. Glieberman hired a private detective to follow the woman and Valerie was eventually caught by the detective, her husband and the police in bed with her lover. And Penny and Aldo — he was having an affair with her sister. And Anita and Mark — she was a lesbian and Glieberman had to prove it in front of a jury.

"All of the cases are true," said the author. "Truth is far stranger than fiction. Some of the more bizarre and sex-saturated cases I didn't even bother with. I figured people wouldn't believe them anyway."

After three drafts were rejected by the publisher ("It was too tight, they wanted more of me.") Glieberman teamed up with writer Paul Neimark, who put the book in its present form.

"I'm not by any means an introvert but it's hard to write about yourself," said Glieberman. "I thought it would sound too egotistical."

There is an element of ego in the book. Glieberman's successful personal life is included (about his only failure was being unable to prevent his family dog from destroying the yard daily), his poor-Jewish-boy-makes-good background, his marriage, his children, his homelife. But if he comes off sounding cocky, there's a reason: this man has worked hard to make it and he has.

"When I got into the field there were only a handful of divorce lawyers in the city and I wanted to help elevate the practice of divorce law. At that time divorce lawyers were one step lower than sewer cleaners. I tried to utilize the same principles in divorce law as are used in any other type of law."

It worked.

Glieberman has built a reputation and an impressive set of professional credentials.

Cheever takes his place among great American writers

FALCONER by John Cheever (Alfred A. Knopf, $7.95)

Reviewed by Joann Van Wye

Ezekiel Farragut — "fratricide, zip to ten, #734-508-32".

This time one of John Cheever's characters has overstepped the bounds of suburban tolerance. In "Falconer," his fourth novel, Cheever is no longer dealing with a suburban setting of adultery, alcoholism, domestic quarrels and suicides that were prevalent in his earlier works — but instead fratricide, and prison walls. This is the story of a man's incarceration and eventual salvation.

Farragut has murdered his only brother with a fire iron — bashed in his head — and now he is serving time in cellblock F of Falconer.

Farragut is a typical enough Cheever character — college professor, 48, Episcopalian, married to a beautiful socialite, home in the suburbs — all the makings of the "good life."

Yet, Farragut experiences the same sense of homelessness and exile that afflicts all Cheever characters.

Manacled to nine other men, Farragut is transported to Falconer where he is certain he will die.

Farragut learns quickly how to survive in the prison world. After his watch is stolen the first day and the guard's only response is "Oh did he rally, did he rally steal your watch?" he realizes he is going to have to look out for himself.

He listens to the tales of other convicts, has a homosexual love affair, gets beaten up by a warden, learns how to steal and conceal things in his cell and finally, busts out.

While experiencing the confinement of his prison cell, he gazes through the bars at people on the outside and realizes life wasn't so free out there. "They were free and yet they moved so casually through this precious element that it seemed wasted on them. There was no appreciation of freedom in the way they moved."

In prison Farragut is afflicted with nostalgia as he searches his past for a sense of home.

"The Farraguts were the sort of people who claimed to be sustained by tradition, but who were in fact sustained by the more robust pursuit of a workable improvisation, uninhibited by consistency," Farragut remembers of his childhood. He has grown up with the knowledge his father wanted him aborted. He became a heroin addict in a "generation of addiction."

The sense of home still evades him in his marriage. He remembers moments of tenderness like when he picked grapes in the hoarfrost for his wife's favorite jelly, but they are few.

As his wife is screaming during her first prison visit, "You've ruined my life, you've ruined my life. There is nothing on earth as cruel as a rotten marriage," he is thinking, "She took the words out of my mouth."

Prison gives Farragut endless hours to sort out his past and an opportunity to experience an unexpected love. By the time of his unplausible escape in a burial sack he has liberated himself from the past and is ready to start a new life.

As he is carried through the prison gates in the sack, he thinks "He had never, that he remembered, been carried before... The sensation of being carried belonged to the past, since it gave him an unlikely feeling of innocence and purity. How strange to be carried so late in life and toward nothing that he truly knew, freed, it seemed, from his erotic crudeness, his facile scorn and his chagrined life..."

The final passage as Farragut heads toward his eventual salvation is one of the most moving ever written. One can't help but feel Cheever is drawing from his own recent experiences. At 60, he suffered a near fatal heart attack and entered a period of profound depression that led him to alcoholism. He recovered to write "Falconer."

"Falconer" is a beautifully written book. Readers who had previously dismissed Cheever as a social observer will be convinced of his place among America's great writers with this latest work.

Florida Burns tries to become 'Queen of Dish'

TELL ME EVERYTHING by Marie Brenner (Dutton, $7.95)

Reviewed by Laura Schmalbach

"Tell Me Everything" is billed as a satirical look at three young, "liberated" career women in New York City. But if there's any bite at all in this novel, it's buried in author Marie Brenner's sophomoric prose.

The unfortunate result is a limp version of a "Cosmopolitan" article (working title: "How to Win the Power Game and Mr. Right, Too") that left me wishing Brenner hadn't told me anything.

"Tell Me Everything" centers on the trials of Florida Burns, a 26-year-old, second-rate gossip columnist whose not-so-secret desire is to muscle her way into Rona Barrett's league. But before she can scrap her Tower Syndicate job and work on becoming the second "Queen of Dish" (Brenner has an annoying penchant for that term) she must cope with everything from a boss who doesn't recognize her potential to a mother back in Austin who wants her to write a book on bachelors in Texas.

Adding to Florida's list of bugaboos are her best friends: Marcie Laster, an administrative assistant at a minor movie studio, and Pamela (Peaches) Rosen, a creamy-skinned plant doctor who makes house calls.

As it turns out, Peaches perks up both the ferns and the love interest of movie star Jason Jaffe, and soon she's traded in her stable stockbroker for the joys of making the pages of "People." But alas, Jaffe's distrust of the press extends to best friends, too, and "Tell Me Everything" is locked out of the hottest story in her career.

Then there's Marcie, who wants out of her own dead end job as badly as Florida. She wrangles an assignment in Florida's own company and sets out to both displace her friend and concoct an expose on a psychopathic rapist who's so likable his victims think they've seduced him.

The novel's major flaw is Brenner's inability to make any of her characters believable. She concentrates her efforts on imitating Tom Wolfe's non-conformist style of writing, but all we're left with is page after page of passages like this one:

"Breasts. I have a few words to say about big ones. Take the problem of 'C.J.' Flournoy. A night crawler let loose during the day when he clung like fungus around the hallways of Lomitas High which was (and is) in Austin. That's Texas. And he gathered spores, waiting for each day's highlight... when Florida Burns cruised into Honors Algebra. Hidden behind a maze of steel lockers, a voice out of nowhere would boom, 'Hey Big Boobies, Hey Big Boobies!'"

Marie Brenner had a great idea when she set out to ridicule the growing number of "how we live now" liberation novels. It's just too bad she didn't bring more writing skills with her.

Glieberman:

He sees the book as an explanation of "the tactics of success, of winning my clients cases. It is an anatomy of a divorce trial lawyer's thinking."

Glieberman sees himself as attempting to be three people: Joe Mannix, Napoleon and Sigmund Freud. The Mannix personality is essential in digging out the facts. This attorney always checks out his clients stories, using private detectives when necessary, flying across the continent himself to unearth an important piece of information.

His Freud personality is needed to deal with not only his clients but their spouses, witnesses, other attorneys and the myriad judges that hand down divorce decrees.

It is the Napoleon personality Glieberman seems to most enjoy. "As an attorney you are a field general. You are in the front lines, you go into the battle yourself. A trial is like a battle — there is the strategy and the psyching out of an opponent.

"And you have to be somewhat dictatorial, the final responsibility in the case is yours. If the case is lost you blame the lawyer. In my office there is only one commander-in-chief and that's me. Once the client and I decide what should be done, it's up to me to do it."

Glieberman has little compassion for the man who suddenly realizes he's been taken for everything he's worth, or the woman who wanted to be nice and later decides she's been had.

"There's no such thing as a client whose been taken advantage of unless they allowed it to happen. In most instances men would take the chivalrous attitude during a divorce. Then six months later he blames the courts, the lawyer and society for being taken. I've had female clients too who wanted to be nice and six months later wonder how they're going to make it.

"The most convenient scapegoat is the one who helped you — the lawyer."

In the book and in person Glieberman emphasizes the importance of correctly choosing the right divorce lawyer. His advice: Don't be penny wise and pound foolish for you will generally get what you pay for and you are putting your financial life on the line. Ask attorneys who don't handle divorce whom they recommend. "Audition" your divorce attorney by sitting in divorce court for a day and seeing him or her in action. Have a personal interview with three possible attorneys to see what kind of rapport develops. Do some reading so you know something about divorce law, and your divorce in particular, before choosing a lawyer. Do not make your choice under pressure; make a rational choice. Know what it is going to cost, what the retainer will be, the hourly rate, the charge for phone conferences, investigations, etc.

Glieberman is a divorce lawyer but he is as committed to saving marriages as helping them to end. "I ask my clients to list all the miserable things their husband, or wife, does, and then list all the good things. Usually there are more good than bad and for the first time they see it graphically. Some rethink what they're doing and go back and try and build on the good things.

"Many people come to my office after thirty years of marriage and say, 'I'm tired, worn out, just don't want to give anymore.' A man will come in and say he's bored with life, business, his wife, his kids. A woman will say, 'He doesn't need me anymore, the kids are gone and I'm nobody.'

"I ask them, 'When's the last time you sat down and really talked, really planned with your spouse. Go away. Sit down and figure out what's going on. Do something that will give you pleasure and make you happy. When you reach the point of dissatisfaction, instead of slipping into depression and blaming your mate, sit down together.'

"I try desperately to save marriages. Then I try for a fair settlement, then I go to trial and get the best settlement possible for my client."

Glieberman doesn't believe the biggest cause for marriage break-ups is sex or money or differing lifestyles. He sees it as "a low threshold for pain. As soon as people are pinched by the shoe, instead of taking it to a shoemaker, they go out and get a new pair of shoes."

"Marriage is love, respect, honor, a value system. Most people don't have a value system anymore. We are brainwashed by obsolescense — trade it in. We handle human relations in the same way. There is no thought that we can make it work.

"We have to go back to some basics. We have to show people the usefulness of marriage."

Helping a child to understand a parent's death

LEARNING TO SAY GOODBYE by Eda LeShan (Macmillan, $5.95)

Reviewed by Laura Schmalbach

Death education and mock funerals notwithstanding, death is still a taboo subject for many people — especially for the parent faced with explaining a spouse's death to young children.

"Learning to Say Goodbye" by educator and family counselor Eda LeShan is written for those children, but her sensitive advice is also a boon for their parents. In a warm, anecdotal style that avoids sermonizing, LeShan charts the grief process from the initial numbness and disbelief to a final acceptance and reunion with the joys of living, and points out that the process is basically the same for parents and children.

She writes about the importance of discussing the pros and cons of attendance at the parent's funeral; of accepting that mourning may mean long solitary walks for one family member and an evening of loud music for another.

LeShan makes frequent use of personal examples; and the experiences of other preteen children give "Learning to Say Goodbye" an extra poignancy. The topics she covers range from coming to terms with a parent's suicide to dealing with insensitive taunts from fellow classmates, and her soft-sell approach is complemented by Paul Giovanopoulos' subtle illustrations.

LeShan points out at the end of the book that times have changed; many parents no longer hide their feelings from their children at all costs, and explanations of death are becoming more realistic than the days of "he went away."

But she contends that children and adults still need to explore their feelings about death with more openness and honesty — "The most important part of living through a terrible experience is to understand and accept your feelings."

"Learning to Say Goodbye" is a good place to start.

BEGINNER'S CORNER — Hint and explanation: Black's queen is surprisingly vulnerable.

U.S. Champion Walter Browne is an uncompromising fighter at the chessboard. His will to win has impressed many, including World Chess Federation president Dr. Max Euwe, who considers Browne a serious prospect for the world championship.

Grandmaster of chess Browne, who is also a "master" of poker, scrabble, and backgammon, brings the same sporting instinct and restless energy to these games.

Whence comes Walter's admirable champion's qualities?

Perhaps from his mother Hilda who projects a distinguishing mental energy and intensity of her own. In particular she is outspoken and honest in the face of hard facts-no small asset for a strong woman or a strong grandmaster of chess.

Curiously, Hilda's great-grandfather was Sir Charles Russell, Baron of Killowen, the Lord Chief Justice of England (1896-1900) under Gladstone.

The baron, himself, was noted for his skill at both chess and cards! In fact, his memoirs describe a journey by train, during which he feigns a slight expertise, but then "hustles" another passenger at poker.

Those who are too easily given to simple explanations of nature or nurture might consider that Walter is also related to the late Bertrand Russell who was philosopher, pacifist, and anti-war activist all in one.

Stamp notes

The U.S. Postal Service will release a block of four 13-cent commemorative stamps featuring Pueblo Indian art on April 13 at Santa Fe, New Mexico.

Each of the semi-jumbo size stamps depicts a painting of a piece of pottery from one of four pueblos involved in pottery production — the Zia, Acoma and San Ildefonso pueblos in New Mexico and the Hopi pueblos in Arizona. Designer Ford Ruthling, a native New Mexico artist, executed the paintings on which the stamps are based.

The new issue will be printed on the gravure press with forty stamps to a pane and five plate numbers.

Collectors affixing their own stamps to covers may send them to "First Day Cancellations, Postmaster, Santa Fe, N.M. 87501" for cancellation and return through the mail. Your outer cover must be postmarked by April 28.

Collectors wishing the Postal Service to affix the stamps should send self-addressed envelopes to "Pueblo Pottery Stamps, Postmaster, Santa Fe, N.M. 87501". You must include a money order or personal check to cover the cost of the stamps affixed. Pencil in lightly in the upper right hand corner of your cover which stamp or stamps you wish. Because of the size of these adhesives, be sure your address is low and well to the left of your cover.

On April 7, the U.S. Postal Service will release a 13-cent embossed envelope marking the sport of Golf. The envelope will be issued during the Masters Golf Tournament at the Augusta National Golf Club in Augusta, Georgia.

Similar to the Tennis envelope issued in 1974, the indicia of the new envelope features a golf club in four sequential positions moving toward the point of impact with a golf ball.

Collectors desiring first day cancellations should send their requests to "Golf Envelope, Postmaster, Augusta, Ga. 39091." The cost is 15 cents per envelope and the 6¾ size will be supplied unless the larger No. 10 envelope is specifically requested. Your remittance should be by money order or personal check and you must supply either return address labels or a separate envelope for their return under cover. Because of the tardy announcement, orders will be accepted through April 22.
